Senate Group Puts Teeth Into Bill to Bar Draft Dodging

Committee for Heavy Penalties;
Acts to Guard Conscripts' Jobs

Washington—(P)—The first peace-time conscription bill in American history was completed today by the senate military committee for consideration by the senate early next week.

Chairman Sheppard (D-Texas) said the committee would vote officially on the legislation Tuesday and predicted there would be no dissenting votes.

One of the final sections approved by the committee would impose penalties of five years in prison and $10,000 in fines for "draft dodgers" or those convicted of aiding them.

The committee also authorized creation of the office of "director of selective service" to handle details of the vast proposal for registering all men between 18 and 63 years inclusive and training part of them.

Washington—(P)—The senate military committee went to work today on methods of curbing peace-time draft dodgers under the pending conscription bill.

It studied penalty proposals which would impose five years imprisonment, and fines up to $10,000 for any man between 18 and 65 who sought to evade compulsory military service if the measure becomes law.

Having decided to recommend passage of the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory service bill in principle, the committee devoted its session yesterday to the question of job security for conscripts who would be called to the colors for a year's service.

Three amendments were agreed on to protect the civilian jobs of men in the ranks.

The first provides that any employer, now subject to the Wagner labor relations act, would be guilty of unfair labor practice if he willfully refused to reinstate a demobilized conscript. Under this section, a convicted employer could be compelled to reinstate a conscript with back pay.

A second amendment—inserted for employers engaged only in interstate commerce—holds it to be the "sense of congress" that all conscripts should be given back their old jobs.

The third concerns federal employees alone, and provides that they be restored to the payroll after their year's military training.

As these amendments were being drafted, the compulsory training legislation came in for criticism in the senate.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) asserted the bill was part of "hysteria."

Argentina in Opposition to 'Trustee' Plan

Objects to Taking Definite Measures At Havana Confab

Havana—(P)—Argentina was a "holdout" today against proposals before the conference of the 21 American republics for Pan American trusteeship over European possessions in the western hemisphere. The southern nation took a determined stand against any general commitments or immediate measures, asserting it was impossible to delegate powers in anticipating of "hypothetical" situations.

Instead, Argentina recommended use of regular diplomatic channels for consultation and rapid application of measures which might be required for defense of the Americas in any situation that might arise.

Leopoldo Melo, head of the Argentine delegation, declared last night the future status of the foreign possessions should be determined by the people involved, without outside pressure.

Hull May Decide

Argentina cannot countenance the application of force over American territory "even in the guise of treaties or conventions effected among the Americas," Melo said.

Whether the other nations, including the United States, would proceed without Argentina on the "collective trusteeship" idea—advanced by the United States, Brazil and other republics—appeared to depend largely on the decision of Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Faced with an Argentine threat to unity of the 21 republics at the Lima conference in 1938, Hull waited for a compromise which brought the declaration of Lima—of Pan American solidarity against foreign aggression—by unanimous vote.

An apparent factor in the Argentine decision was a desire to avoid any action which might prejudice her future trade relations with European countries, where a major part of her exports went before the war.

Attorney for Reds Is Beaten

Waylaid by Group As He Leaves Court In West Virginia

Princeton, W. Va.—(P)—Louis Fleischer, attorney for the national campaign committee of the Communist party, was waylaid and beaten by a group of men as he left the courtroom yesterday after detaining the signer of a Communist petition.

Sheriff G. H. Crumpecker reported.

The Bluefield Telegraph said several men assaulted the attorney inside the building, knocking him down stairs, and others met him in the street and beat him, then followed him from town in a car.

The attorney, who a few days ago appeared at Lewisburg as one of counsel for Oscar Wheeler, Communist candidate for governor, came here to defend Milo Zivokovich.

Zivokovich was fined $25 and sentenced to 90 days in jail on a charge of voting in the May 14 primary after signing a petition to place the Communist party on the November ballot. He was one of several hundred persons similarly indicted throughout the state.

Signers of the petition were legally barred from voting in the primary.

Wheeler, whose case was delayed on jurisdictional grounds, was named in nine indictments charging him with fraudulently obtaining signatures to the Communist petition.

Crumpecker expressed the opinion Fleischer was not seriously hurt.

4 Killed, 37 Hurt In Gibraltar Raid

Cadix, Spain—(P)—Four persons were killed and 37 wounded when enemy airplanes bombed Gibraltar today, reports from Britain's rock fortress said. Damage was reported to be considerable.

At least 20 bombs struck Ladrillo dock, the seaside suburb of Caleta and Gibraltar itself, and docks near the rock's arsenal, the Hotel Caleta, and the area around Point Europe and its soldiers' barracks were damaged.

Several houses collapsed under the concussion.

One of the dead was a woman of undetermined nationality.

Some of those injured were reported knocked down in the stampede for air-shelters.

The output averaged 200 daily last month.

Heat Wave Ends; 25 Dead in State

Rain, Cooling Winds Bring Relief; Storms Cause Damage; 73 in City

Appleton jumped out of bed this morning after a good sleep, looked at the thermometer to be sure the heat wave wasn't back, and went off to work in high spirits.

The city hailed with unrestrained joy today the cooler temperatures, the thermometer riding a range 20 degrees below its level the last week.

Rain and cooling winds, borne in from the west late Thursday, broke the back of the searing heat wave that held Wisconsin for seven sweltering days.

Twenty-five deaths attributed to the weather were reported during the period, according to the Associated Press. Six other persons drowned as they sought relief from temperatures that rose in several sections of Wisconsin to over the 100-degree mark.

Yesterday's high in Appleton was 92, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. A late afternoon shower marked the end of the heat wave, the thermometer hitting a 24-hour low of 67 at 5 o'clock this morning.

The rain was accompanied in some areas by severe wind and electrical storms that caused at least one death and considerable property damage.

During the height of the storm, Ernest Leingruber, a Racine county resident, was killed by a lightning bolt at Highway 41 and the Seven Mile road. Many trees and barns in southern Wisconsin were blown down, and part of the metal roof of the Rock River Woolen Mills at Janesville was torn off. Highway 14 between Janesville and Delavan was temporarily blocked by fallen trees and poles carrying electric and telephone wires.

A farmer was injured when the wind razed a barn in the Lake Geneva neighborhood.

The wind and rain drove Milwaukee temperatures down to 71 degrees early in the evening after the thermometer had registered 102.1 at 3:15 p. m. At Janesville, the mercury dropped from 106 to 76 in one hour.

Madison, which wilted under 101 degree heat, also was cooled by a wind, hail and rainstorm.

Additional cooler weather was predicted for Wisconsin today with possible showers and thundershowers.

One of the strangest heat casualties reported Thursday was that of

Crew Refuses To Leave Port

Dutch Sailors Won't Make Voyage Without Guns Aboard Vessel

Chicago—(P)—The Dutch merchant vessel Prins Willem III rode at anchor outside the Lake Michigan breakwater today, her departure delayed by the crew's refusal to sail aboard an unarmed ship.

Crew members said that the 2,800-ton freighter was the target of German bombers May 10 off Flushing, Holland, and that they wanted armament to protect themselves in the event of future attacks.

Seventeen of the crew—the complement except for a steward and Captain W. P. C. Heisinger—announced their decision shortly before the vessel was scheduled to sail for an unnamed foreign port.

The freighter, out of Antwerp and owned by the Orange Lines of Holland, unloaded a cargo of seeds and twine here June 27 after calls at Montreal, Duluth and Milwaukee.

Wallace to Quit After Drive Starts, FDR Hint

Washington—(P)—Secretary Wallace said today he planned to resign or take a leave of absence without pay from his cabinet post as soon as he begins active political campaigning for the vice presidency.

In a formal statement, Wallace said charges that the department's farm program organization could be used as a "sort of political machine" in the coming election disclosed an "amazing ignorance" of the manner in which the program was carried out.

Washington—(P)—President Roosevelt gave a clear indication today that Secretary Wallace would resign from the cabinet as soon as he began active campaigning at the Democratic nominee for vice president.

The chief executive told a press conference, in response to a request for comment on his first talk with his new running mate on campaign strategy yesterday, that all he could do was to relate a story.

The story was that in 1920, after Mr. Roosevelt was nominated for vice president on the Democratic ticket, he saw President Woodrow Wilson and asked when he should submit his resignation as assistant secretary of the navy.

The president said Wilson told him he had concluded on the basis of historical precedence that he should not resign until the start of

Former Detroit Police Head Faces U. S. Court

Detroit—(P)—Fred W. Frahm, former Detroit police superintendent awaiting trial on charges of having accepted protection money from gamblers during his tenure of office, was named in a four-count federal grand jury indictment today charging income tax evasion.

John C. Lehr, United States district attorney, said the indictment alleged Frahm paid only $418.76 in income taxes from 1936 to 1940, while the government charged he should have paid $8,901.63.

The government charged that Frahm's gross income for the four-year period exceeded $110,000, although his annual salary during 1936, 1937 and 1938, not taxable, ranged from $6,860 to $7,920.

Start Confabs To Determine Balkans' Fate

Rumanian Officials Hold Parleys With Hitler, Ribbentrop

Berlin—(P)—Adolf Hitler this afternoon received Rumanian Premier Ion Gurgutu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu in the great hall of the Berghof, his mountain-top retreat at Berchtesgaden.

German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and the Rumanian minister to Berlin were present at the conference.

Informed circles said the Rumanian statesmen would leave tonight for Rome.

Salzburg, Germany—(P)—Premier Ion Gurgutu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu of Rumania arrived here today for the first of a series of weekend conferences at which Balkan diplomats will be told what plan Adolf Hitler has for their countries.

They were to have lunch with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop at the latter's Fuschl castle, nearby.

The program for this afternoon, according to informed German sources, included tea at Lake Konigssee, which is near Hitler's retreat at Berchtesgaden. This was taken as an indication the Rumanian guests were likely to be received by the fuhrer.

The Rumanians were met at the station by Von Ribbentrop and representatives of the army and the navy party. After taking a salute of honor in company with the German foreign minister, they went to their hotel and from there to Fuschl castle.

Nazi Deny Report

Berlin—(P)—Foreign office sources flatly disavowed today the German official news agency's report that Germany had given recognition to an autonomist movement in French Brittany.

These sources said the newspaper in Rennes, France, which DNE, the official news agency, had quoted on the matter had "slipped this idea through when nobody was looking," and that DNE in turn had circulated it without authorization.

Avenol Quits League Office

Resignation Likely To Mean Formal End Of International Body

Geneva—(P)—Joseph A. C. Avenol, Frenchman who has been secretary-general of the League of Nations since July 1, 1933, announced his resignation today, stating the "realities" of the present times made his office no longer necessary.

Thus Avenol signed what may well be the formal death sentence of the league as a political body—a death it has been dying steadily since 1932, when Japan's armies were sent into Manchuria.

Avenol submitted his resignation last night in a telegram sent to the governments of the league's member states.

Saying that until September, 1938, when he visited Premier Mussolini at Rome, he had believed "certain inevitable reforms would enable the league . . . to regroup the forces which were moving away from it."

Avenol's wife declared the duties of his office now "no longer justify maintenance of political high direction, which no longer is consistent with the realities of the situation."

Patterson Gets Committee O.K.

Washington—(P)—President Roosevelt's nomination of Robert Porter Patterson as assistant secretary of war was approved by the senate military committee today.

Chairman Sheppard (D-Texas) said the committee authorized him to report the nomination favorably to the senate without a hearing.

Patterson, a Republican and New York circuit judge, was nominated to succeed Louis Johnson at the request, the White House said, of Henry L. Stimson, a Republican, whom Mr. Roosevelt picked for the war department cabinet post.

Clash at Sea Off Northern Irish Coast

Belfast, Northern Ireland—(P)—Heavy gunfire was heard off the northern Ireland coast early today and flashes of fire between ships and airplanes could be seen from the shore.

Witnesses on the coast said German air-raiders apparently had attacked a convoy. British fighter planes sped to the rescue.

The shore observers said one German plane appeared to have been shot down.

The raid was the first on a convoy to be witnessed in north Irish waters.

London—(P)—Nazi warplanes surged over the United Kingdom again today despite the toll taken by anti-aircraft fire and combat craft in the almost continuous British-German air war.

One German bomber, hotly pursued by British fighters, jettisoned its bomb load over a southeast England town today. The explosives caused some casualties and damaged several houses.

In southwest England this morning a German bomber was shot down and three crewmen killed. An English farmer dashed out and captured the pilot.

British pursuit planes chased off a flight of Nazi raiders winging over a southeast English area.

German planes were reported over various southwest England localities and a town in Wales reported the drone of enemy planes overhead but no bombs were dropped there.

Down 28 Planes

Twenty-eight German warplanes were shot down by Royal Air Force fighters and anti-aircraft batteries in Thursday's day-long battles over the British Isles—a record day's "bag" for R. A. F. operations from Britain—the government announced today.

After these losses, only a few Nazi planes ventured over the islands during the night.

"Slight enemy activity" was reported last night over southeast and southwest England and Wales, and some bombs were dropped near a town in East Anglia, but no damage was reported from any area, the air ministry and the ministry of home security said.

It was the second successive night of lulls in aerial activity—attributed the previous night to unfavorable weather—and the third since Germany began large-scale daily bombings June 18.

Until tonight, however, massed Nazi air raiders thundered over the English channel in repeated waves yesterday, striking at British ship convoys.

British Losses

The admiralty acknowledged today that a German plane and torpedo boat attacked yesterday on a 21-ship convoy in the English channel sank five and damaged five merchantmen and two British destroyers.

The admiralty also announced loss of the trawler Fleming in a clash with four German dive bombers.

The admiralty challenged the German high command's claim that 11 ships totaling 43,000 tons in the convoy were sunk.

The admiralty said the Germans attacked the convoy in successive waves of 30 planes each and that as a result five small vessels total-

Survives Fever Of 109.6 Degrees

Chicago—(P)—After surviving a fever of 109.6 degrees, Paul Balas, 35, a gardener, was expected to recover, physicians at Swedish Covenant hospital said today.

Balas collapsed from the 101-degree heat yesterday and was removed to the hospital. He was given injections and ice packs to reduce the heavy blood pressure in the brain. A few hours later his temperature had dropped to 101.3.

Dr. A. C. Peterson, who treated Balas, said such an upset to the temperature control apparatus of the body usually demands the brain and ordinarily death was immediate.

He said that although it was impossible to learn immediately the full extent of the damage in such a case, Balas' survival of the intense fever gave him an unusual chance to recover.

June Traffic Accidents Take Toll of 60 Lives

Madison—(P)—June traffic accidents in Wisconsin this year claimed 60 lives, compared with 62 in the same month last year, the safety division of the motor vehicle department reported today.

June was the first month since January to show a decrease in fatalities over the same month of the previous year. Traffic accidents killed 361 persons in the first six months of 1940, compared with 369 in the same period of 1939.

May Ask Safe Passage For English Children

Washington—(P)—Asserting that the United States has a deep desire to do everything possible to help remove children from England, President Roosevelt said today the administration eventually might ask for reasonable assurances that refugee children could obtain safe passage to this country.

The first step, he told a press conference, involves providing perhaps 10,000 children in Britain with passports.

The next step, he said, would be to find out what the British government would be able to do about sending the children to the United States, or perhaps Canada, in British vessels.

A little later on, the president continued, the stage might be reached when the United States would ask for reasonable assurance that if American vessels went over to evacuate them, there would be no torpedoings.

There are three sides to the problem, the president said, on being asked for comment on legislation pending in congress to permit the

Germany Disclaims Responsibility for Sinking French Ship

Berlin—(P)—DNE, official German news agency, last night disclaimed responsibility for the sinking of the French transport Meknes while taking 1,300 Frenchmen from England back to France on grounds that the German government was not informed of any British request for safe transport. The agency did not say whether Germans sank the ship, as the British said.

London—(P)—Official figures today showed nine officers and 374 men missing from the French liner Meknes which the British said was sunk Wednesday by a German torpedo boat while engaged in repatriating French sailors.

It was believed by authorities, however, that some of the passengers made for the French coast in the ship's boats.

In addition to 1,179 French naval officers and men, there were two women and one child aboard, and a crew of 99.

The women and child and 895 officers and men were landed in Britain.

Willkie Eyes N. Y. Votes; Maps Strategy

Pleased With Recent Western Tour; May Make Southern Swing

BY WILLIAM R. ARDERY
Colorado Springs, Colo. — Wendell L. Willkie, pleased with his reception on a flying speaking tour through Wyoming and Utah, turned today to a consideration of campaign tactics to be used in wooing New York state's potent voters.

The Republican nominee arranged a conference with J. Russell Sprague, New York Republican national committeeman and a manager of Thomas E. Dewey's unsuccessful drive for the Republican nomination.

Sprague, who already has declared his allegiance to Willkie, was expected to tell the nominee about his chances of carrying New York in November.

Willkie was reported considering a swing through the Democratic south on his way to his home town, Elwood, Ind., to deliver his formal acceptance address Aug. 17.

The nominee returned to his vacation hotel yesterday after traveling 1,400 miles on his swing through Wyoming and Utah.

He said he planned to "take a week off" next week and retire to some secluded place to work on his acceptance speech.

Willkie discussed arrangements for his acceptance speech yesterday with Indiana supporters. One of them, Arch N. Bobbitt, Indiana state chairman, told reporters that the nominee "will carry the state easily and will be elected the same way."

Wears Willkie Button

New York — Councilman Alfred E. Smith, Jr., had a Wendell Willkie button on his coat lapel today.

"Do you mean it?" he was asked. "I certainly do," Smith replied. "Is your father wearing one?"

"He is," answered the son of the 1928 Democratic presidential candidate.

Young Smith was elected to the New York city council as an independent Democrat.

Ackerman Wants Journalism Rated As a Profession

Washington — Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia University School of Journalism urged the wage-hour administration today to classify journalism as a profession.

He testified at a hearing called to receive suggestions for re-defining the term "executive" in administration of the wage-hour act.

Ackerman said schools of journalism were established with state grants intended to aid in training professional workers. In supporting his contention that journalism was purely professional, he cited intellectual requirements and the relation of journalism to good government.

Dean Kenneth E. Olsen of Northwestern university, speaking for 22 schools of journalism, said they contended that the work which their graduates did was professional in character and that all connected with journalism were professional workers even though they were not graduates of journalism schools.

Professional workers are exempt from wage and hour provisions of the law.

Confers on Addition To Waterworks Plant

William U. Gallaher, Appleton waterworks superintendent, was in Madison yesterday conferring with state officials on erection of a chemical storage house at the Appleton plant. The house will include an office, laboratory room for machines used to test and weigh chemicals.

2 Cars are Damaged In Minor Collision

Cars driven by Winton Schumaker, 23, Y. M. C. A., and Chris Kindler, Kaukauna, were damaged in a minor accident on Drew street about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Schumaker was going north and Kindler south when the collision occurred, according to police.

'I AM' LEADERS INDICTED ON MAIL FRAUD CHARGES—Mrs. Edna Ballard and Donald Ballard (above), widow and son of Guy Ballard, founder of the "I Am" foundation, a nationwide movement with a reported million converts, were among 24 leaders of the group indicted by the federal grand jury in Los Angeles on mail fraud charges. The true bill mentioned sums "in excess of $80,000" and alleged the defendants had falsely represented the elder Ballard, who called himself St. Germain and contended he was a reincarnation of George Washington.

'I Am' Leaders Free on Bond

Religious Cult Heads Ask Early Trial So 'Truth Will Prevail'

Los Angeles — Six Los Angeles leaders of the "I Am" religious organization, among 24 indicted throughout the nation on mail fraud and conspiracy charges, went free today under bonds, pending arraignment July 31.

"We welcome an early trial so that the 'divine truth' of the mighty I Am presence will prevail," said Mrs. Edna W. Ballard, widow of the cult's founder.

"I am serene in my confidence that we shall be vindicated. Our cause is just. I thank the United States government for indicting us," Norman Neukom, assistant United States attorney, said the I Am group had collected nearly $3,000,000 since its founding in 1930 and the defendants are accused of falsely representing that the leaders had the power to become immortal.

Mrs. Ballard, present head of the cult, referred to in the indictment as St. Germain, alias Joan of Arc, Jesus and Lotus Ray King, and her son, Edna Eros Ballard, also identified as LaFayette, were released under $5,000 bonds each.

Charles M. Sindelar, editor of the cult publication "The Voice," and his wife, Pearl, posted the same bail. Bert Corporon, Long Beach staff worker, was released under $2,500, and Harry N. Rogers, former group leader and teacher, under $1,000.

Cubs Will Bivouac At Erb Park During Pow-Wow Saturday

Erb park is going to be sprinkled with tents and other makeshift shelters — like the habitat of an army in the field — when valley council camps gather there tomorrow.

Cubs have been encouraged by the council to build shelters on the grounds before 1:30 in the afternoon, the starting time for the annual pow-wow. No "tailor made" tents will be permitted on the grounds, so you can expect to see all sorts of unique architecture.

It has been suggested that parents of cubs come to the park in the morning and eat their noon meal in picnic style before the program gets underway.

Official inspection of cubs and camp sites will be held at 1:30 and 15 minutes later the games will start.

Defense Training Quota For State Will be Filled

Madison — Mark Muth, state WPA administrator, said today he anticipated Wisconsin's quota of 2,200 men assigned for national defense training in vocational schools would be filled by the end of next week.

The training program got underway Wednesday and up to the present time schools in 12 cities had requested assignment of 625 workers, including machine shop men, auto mechanics, welders, electricians, sheet metal workers, pattern makers, foundrymen, and Diesel engine workers.

"The program is being met with enthusiasm throughout the state," Muth said. "Vocational schools and municipal authorities are giving the finest kind of cooperation, and we hope the result of the training will go a long way to relieve the shortage of skilled labor that threatens to handicap the vital national defense program."

English Capitalize on Hitler's Failure to Act

Every Day Fuehrer Delays Attack Adds to Defensive Strength of Isles

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York — Every day that Herr Hitler withholds the blow by which he hopes to destroy England adds to the defensive strength of that tight little island, and to British chances in general against nazidom.

At least that is what has been happening up to now. This being the case, the Fuehrer's delay in striking with his victorious war machine has become one of the wonders of the world.

Had the Germans attempted their blitzkrieg when they had smashed France, and British defense was more or less at sixes and sevens, the war might have been over now. As it is, England has developed a strength which has been producing astonishing results in the daily aerial dog-fights over Britain and the channel, and in raids on Germany.

The Nazi task certainly has piled up in the past few weeks. One reason for the German delay may be the conversation this week between Balkan officials and Nazi Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop. Berlin claims these conferences are urgent because Britain is trying to trick the Balkans into war so that they won't be able to furnish the reich with food.

Would be Smart Move Personally I shouldn't be surprised. It would be a smart move on England's part if she could build a bonfire on Hitler's back door-step now.

Equally disturbing from the German standpoint must be the growing power of the British air force. A sample of what has been going forward was seen yesterday in the violent fighting over England.

London authorities claimed that 23 German warplanes were shot down by Royal Air Force fighters and anti-aircraft guns, as against a loss of five British machines.

Perhaps more to the point is the British claim that by 1,000 heavy air-raids against German positions they have made it very difficult for the enemy to organize mass raids against England from airbases in Holland, Belgium and France.

This may easily account in part for some of Hitler's delay in making his big attack. Mass bombing of England is, of course, vital to the success of any invasion which the Nazis might attempt.

The British ability to carry out such extensive air operations is due to the great increase in their airplane production. This has more than doubled since the start of the war, and the British claim that they are rapidly approaching the German rate of production.

Large Imports Besides home manufacture there has been considerable imports of planes from America, and a goodly number of French planes went to England when France collapsed.

Yesterday Washington said that this country would do all it could to meet a British request for 3,000 planes a month throughout 1941 and 1942.

It is clear from this program that England is looking beyond mere defense, and intends to try to carry the war to Germany in due course.

Just now, too, Britain is moving to tighten her naval blockade by which she hopes to strangle Germany.

many and Italy into collapse. The indications are that Spain is to be blockaded to prevent supplies, especially oil, from passing through to Italy and Germany. Coincidentally, Washington has stopped two shipments of oil to Spain because the cargoes appeared destined for the axis powers.

With all this the reports grow that the continent is feeling the shortage of food because of the blockade. The latest to be pinched are the Italians. The government has ordered a fourth meatless day per week and sharp rationing of bread in restaurants.

Onaway Camp Ends Tomorrow

Youths to Evacuate Grounds in Morning; Committee in Visit

Parents going to Chain O' Lakes tomorrow to bring their boys back from the Y. M. C. A. camp on Onaway island should be there by 10 o'clock in the morning, Homer Gebhardt, "Y" secretary, said today.

The camp must be cleared by that hour to allow another organization to begin its summer session, Gebhardt said.

The camp committee from the Appleton association visited the camp last night. Members of the committee are Carl Sherry, chairman, Dr. S. J. Kloehn, Dr. J. L. Benton, and J. D. Reeder. Gebhardt accompanied the committee.

The Onaway campers closed their camping activities last night with a treasure hunt and movies.

Cannon Files Papers In Race for Governor

Madison — Former Representative Raymond J. Cannon, Milwaukee, filed papers Thursday as a Democratic candidate for the nomination for governor.

He issued a statement declaring he belonged to no faction of the Democratic party but counted among his friends members of all groups.

"If nominated I will not be controlled by an clique," he said. "I will make no deals, nor will I withdraw if nominated. I will be solely the candidate of the Democratic party."

"I have always looked with regret upon the bitter factionalism and feuds that have prevailed in the party in Wisconsin during the last eight years. It has been sad, indeed, that this great party was unable to function harmoniously during these years."

Man Trapped When Barn Is Blown Down

Farmhand Is Pinned By Heavy Beam and Tons of Loose Hay

Lake Geneva, Wis. — Herbert Schultz, 24, farmer of nearby Como, was trapped under fallen timbers and hay for more than two hours last night when his barn was blown down during a severe windstorm.

Rescuers, including construction workers with heavy jacks, finally succeeded in lifting a heavy beam which had pinned Schultz' left leg. Dr. R. C. Halsey of Lake Geneva, who administered to Schultz during rescue operations, said the young farmer suffered a possible fracture of the pelvis and that his leg was broken in two places.

Schultz, the father of a month-old baby, was doing chores with a younger brother and a hired hand when the barn collapsed. The other two escaped, but Schultz slipped and was pinned under the timbers and tons of loose hay.

Educator Dies

Chicago — Mrs. Lillian H. Wright, 72, who told friends she was the first woman county superintendent of schools in Green Lake county, Wis., died at her home here yesterday.

She retired five years ago after having been connected with the teaching profession for 40 years.

Fear Journalist Lost

Michigan City, Ind. — Richard Kunkel, 25, sports editor of the Michigan City News-Dispatch, was believed drowned last night in Lake Michigan when a small sail boat capsized in a sudden squall.

Three companions were rescued. Coast guardsmen and police searched unsuccessfully throughout the night for Kunkel.

Those with him were Richard Bentley, 35; Paul Jackson, 38, and Edward Lyons, 28, all of Michigan City.

Their boat was almost into port here when the squall struck and carried it a quarter of a mile out into the lake, where it turned over and sank within a minute.

Motorist Killed

Madison — Chicago's Harper S. Hoover, 67, of Chicago, was killed last night when his automobile overturned on Highway 12 three miles east of Middleton. Sheriff Edward A. Fischer said he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. Hoover lived at the Edgewater Beach hotel in Chicago. Cards in his pocket indicated he was a real estate broker.

'Towering Problems' Are Cited by Clausen

Fox Lake — All the issues confronting the voter are dwarfed "by the two towering problems" he must solve, Fred H. Clausen of Horicon, candidate for the Republican United States senatorial nomination, declared last night.

He listed the two as: "Shall free enterprise be thrown into the discard? Shall representative government give way to one-man executive power?"

"Decide the questions; the solutions of the others will follow in quick order," he said, adding:

"You are either New Deal or anti-New Deal. There is no half-way mark. You can't have your cake and eat it too. You can't take the good things of the New Deal and also swallow its bitter un-American ideals. . . . Whatever is good in the New Deal will be continued by either party in power; provided it is good and that it is good for the greatest number of people."

Canal Hearing Is Adjourned

Special Master Tours Sanitary Canal to Get First-Hand Information

Joliet, Ill. — Special master Monte Lemann concluded the Joliet phase of the water diversion hearing the last of 121 witnesses testifying in support of the state's contention that unsanitary conditions require an increase in the flowage of Lake Michigan water through the sanitary district canal.

After hearing the final witness, the special master took another cruise over the canal's murky waters in quest of first-hand information on conditions along the waterway.

The hearings will be resumed in Chicago, Sept. 9, Lemann said. He was named by the United States supreme court to conduct the hearing after Illinois petitioned that the diversion of water through the canal be boosted from 1,500 to 5,000 cubic feet per second. The petition is opposed by several lake states on the ground that such diversion would lower the level of the Great Lakes.

During the hearing here, witnesses testified that the stench of the canal made them ill, that contact with the water caused skin infections, that the recovery of medical patients was retarded because of the canal's odors, and that the atmosphere at times was "nauseating" because of the waterway.

Yesterday's final witness, Thomas J. Testin, Joliet bacteriologist, testified that one cubic centimeter of canal water contained enough impurities to make 500 gallons of pure water unsafe for drinking.

Guard Officers Will Be Examined Sunday

A group of 87 national guard officers from northern and eastern Wisconsin will be given physical examinations Sunday morning at St. Elizabeth hospital, Captain H. J. Piette, commander of Company D of the 127th infantry, said today.

The officers will come from units as far north as Rhinelander and as far south as Sheboygan. There will be two examination periods, one starting at 9 o'clock and the second at 10:30.

War Situation Today Italian Planes Raid Gibraltar; British Say They Were Repulsed

Italian bombing planes have renewed attacks on Britain's great rock fortress of Gibraltar—gateway sentinel of the Mediterranean—the fascist high command said today.

The heavily-fortified bastion, it said, was "effectively bombed" after a long night flight from Italian bases.

Dispatches from Gibraltar said unspecified "enemy" planes bombed the stronghold in a 30-minute raid before dawn but were driven off by anti-aircraft fire.

Meanwhile, the German-controlled Holland radio was quoted as saying a Dutch peace committee has appealed to President Roosevelt "in the name of humanity" to arrange a peace conference.

May Locate Defense Units In Fox Valley

Immell Urges City Officials to Put Bid in for Bases

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Municipal officials in many Wisconsin communities are being informally urged by Adjutant General Ralph M. Immell of the Wisconsin National guard to arrange for the construction of the necessary facilities to accommodate army and naval air and land squadrons which are authorized under the new defense program.

Because of the huge size of the new defense preparations, Immell is advising Wisconsin local authorities that new military and naval units will have to be provided with a tremendous number of new bases throughout the country, and Wisconsin has a number of strategically located communities eligible to become the sites for such bases.

In an interview in his office yesterday, Immell singled out the Lake Winnebago and Green Bay regions as ideal potential locations for naval air squadrons authorized under the new defense measures.

Already Interested Municipal authorities in Oshkosh and Green Bay are already actively interested, according to Immell. Other sources have already pointed out that because of their proximity to the heavy lake trade channels, and particularly Sault Ste. Marie and the Lake Superior iron shipping centers, communities in eastern Wisconsin near Lake Winnebago and Green Bay would make logical locations for naval units.

"We know we are rearming," the head of the Wisconsin National guard said.

"Now is the time to take the opportunity under WPA to build airfields and facilities in Wisconsin communities," he urged.

Immell has already conferred with Mayor George Oaks of Oshkosh on a possible Lake Winnebago project, and he has consulted with heads of other Wisconsin localities. It was learned.

He said he had no further information on the result of the rivalry between Milwaukee and Madison for the location of the new national guard air unit which was recently allotted to Wisconsin. He said it would probably require nine or ten months to furnish the planes to equip the unit.

Democratic Convention Called 'Totalitarian'

Milwaukee — Dr. John Koehler, candidate for the Republican United States senatorial nomination, declared in an address last night that the recent Democratic national convention should be public proof to the nation that totalitarian dictatorship rules that party.

"The Democratic convention was a totalitarian convention boss-ruler and boss-driven," he asserted. "No party, nor even a democracy, can survive under the whip of a dictator."

"It was a convention of payrollers who heard the voice of their master. The only interest the delegates payrollers had in the convention was the perpetuation of their jobs."

Question 36 Workmen in Defense Plan

WPA Employees to Be Offered Training
In Basic Industries

Thirty-six Appleton WPA employees were interviewed this week, in the first step in the program to provide training for men who may enter industries essential to national defense preparations. William Farnum, WPA social service worker, reported today.

The proposed plan calls for co-operation between WPA agencies that will interview and certify the men, and vocational schools that will offer instructors and facilities for training.

Farnum reported that he talked with 30 men in Kaukauna and with about a dozen in Neenah-Menasha. "Trainees" are questioned regarding experience in mass production industries, with tools and machines in allied occupations, or at skills involving manual dexterity. Even hobbies involving skillful use of the hands and experience in the repair of farm machinery are considered important factors.

The worker's general health, interest, and ambition are also considered in the survey.

Although the Appleton Vocational school has yet to take official action on the program, it is expected the board will approve the school's part in the training. Under the present plan, the vocational schools would give further tests to the WPA employees and then begin serious training.

Farnum said that he will conduct more interviews in Appleton and vicinity "when we receive more requests."

Attempted Bribery Brings 2-Year Term

Kenosha—(7)—Held in the county jail on a charge of assault with intent to rob, Jesus Andrade, 36, wrote a note to District Attorney John P. McEvoy:

"I would give you $50 and don't say anything to anybody if you could help me out of this case. I will not mention a thing about the $50 to anybody. Please see what you can do for me."

McEvoy showed the letter to Circuit Judge A. L. Drury. Wednesday Andrade was charged with attempted bribery and sentenced to two years in the state prison.

Ask Higher Rates to Pay Increased Taxes

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Although the Common-wealth Telephone company, which operates scores of rural telephone exchanges including a number in northeastern Wisconsin, has applied for authority to increase its rates to provide an extra annual revenue of $75,000, only a small fraction of that amount will be used to increase the rate of return on the company's investment, public service commission records showed today.

Only about $13,000 of the total of increased operating revenues requested will be used for improvement of the rate of return, they said. If present economic conditions warranted it.

The balance of new revenue is needed for taxation payments to the state and federal governments, for an additional depreciation allowance, and to meet higher expenses occasioned by the federal wages and hours act, the company testified in its petition to the state utilities commission.

ing made to determine whether anything was taken. Kiekhofers said a small amount of coffee and spices was taken at his store. Under-sheriff Fred Frank, who is investigating, said the thieves entered the Miller home through a basement window and the stores through rear doors.

Paper Mills in Valley Enjoying Minor Boom

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—The Wisconsin paper and paper products industry, keystone of the Fox River Valley industrial area, has enjoyed a minor boom in the last year, the industrial commission reported today, with employment in June of 1940 almost 10 per cent above June of 1939 and total payrolls almost 15 per cent.

A steadily rising payroll and employment index in the industry was continued from May to June of this year, the commission statistical department noted, with number of wage earners in paper manufacturing plants rising 2.8 per cent during the period, and total payrolls jumping 4.3 per cent.

The paper industry claimed about 22,900 of the total of 222,100 employees in Wisconsin manufacturing industries in June, or about 10 per cent, the statistical survey disclosed. In May the total employment was only 22,200, and a year ago 20,900, it was shown.

Total weekly payrolls of the Wisconsin paper industry in June averaged $612,000, compared with $536,000 a year ago and $587,000 in the previous month.

The average work week in June consisted of 42.1 hours, average hourly earnings 63.5 cents, and average weekly earnings $28.75.

Individual Fox River Valley communities continued to show improvement in payroll and employment statistics in the industrial commission's survey.

Appleton reported an increase of 5.5 per cent in employment over May and 10 per cent over June of last year, with an even greater increase in weekly payrolls, 7.1 per cent and 12.5 per cent, respectively.

Oshkosh employment rose 1.9 per cent over May and 13.9 per cent over June of 1939, while Neenah employment was almost 18 per cent above a year ago, and one per cent ahead of May. In Menasha factories in June were employing slightly fewer persons than in May, but 8.7 per cent more than in June of last year.

$40,000 Drop in Electric Rates Is Authorized

Public Service Corp. Reduction Applies in Adjoining Counties

The Wisconsin Public Service Corporation has been authorized to reduce its electric rates about $40,000 a year, the second such cut made this year, the public service commission reported from Madison this morning, according to the Associated Press.

The rate change will benefit 42-200 home users in 145 communities of 20 central and northeastern counties of Wisconsin. It is part of a plan which may result in annual savings of $200,000 to corporation customers, the commission said.

A representative of the corporation at Green Bay said today that he does not believe any clients in Outagamie county will be affected, for the reduction applies to village and city rates. The firm's customers in this county are on rural lines.

The reduction will apply to customers in the city of Waupaca and Waupaca county in general, in Chilton and in parts of Calumet county, in the Oshkosh area and most of Winnebago county.

Customers living in the following other counties will be affected: Brown, Door, Forest, Kewaunee, Langlade, Lincoln, Manitowish, Marathon, Marinette, Oconto, Oneida, Portage, St. Croix, Sheboygan, Vilas, and Washington.

In January the corporation reduced rates about $40,000 annually to 51,200 residential customers in the same areas. At that time officials indicated that if earnings continued at approximately the existing level further reductions in residential, commercial and power rates would be made during 1940 to bring total reductions to $200,000.

New Contingent of Boy Scouts Invades Gardner Dam Sunday

Scouts will be coming and going at Gardner Dam, valley council camp, Sunday.

As scouts who have spent the last week or so at the camp on the Wolf river leave for home, a new contingent, about 70 strong, will be settling down for their turn at such things as canoeing, horseback riding, swimming, and working for merit badges.

The valley council office estimated today that there will be about 80 boys in camp next week, counting the number who will "stay over" for another week.

Scheduled for next week are Troop 43, Neenah; Troop 47, Wittenberg; Troop 36, Brillion; Troop 19, Kimberly; Troop 5, Appleton; and a group of scouts from Shawano troops.

Meta L. Trayer, et al, to Charles Penney, a lot in the city of New London.

George E. Krueger to Gordon J. Chich, part of two lots in the city of New London.

John McCann, et al, to H. A. Gloudehans, three lots in the Thirteenth ward, Appleton.

August Arps to Edgar E. H. Arps, two lots in the Second ward, Kaukauna.

Streator-Hansen company to Lester J. Laughlin, a lot in the old Fourth ward, Appleton.

Emmett Newhouse, et al, to Clarence Vanden Berg, a parcel of land in the town of Freedom.

Victoria Bahl Gerbing to Anna M. Bahl, part of a lot in the old Sixth ward, Appleton.

Taking of Testimony Continued in Suit

Taking of testimony in the $10,000 civil suit of Edward Vandenberg, Kaukauna, against Arthur Dix and Russell Dix, Calumet county, continued today in circuit court of Judge Joseph R. McCarthy. The case opened yesterday morning before a jury.

Vandenberg seeks damages for alleged injuries in a traffic accident at Kaukauna, Dec. 22, 1939. A trailer on a car owned by Dix and driven by his son, Russell, broke away from the car and collided with the Vandenberg machine.

Sixth District Progressives To Hold Rally

Event Will Be Held Sunday Afternoon at Calumet County Park

The program will open at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The district includes Calumet, Fond du Lac, Ozaukee, Sheboygan, Washington and Winnebago counties.

Music will be provided by the 55-piece Chilton high school band under the direction of Marvin Hoffmann. A flag raising ceremony will be followed with the oath of allegiance led by Al Lawton, Chilton. The Rev. E. L. Hennig of the Ebenezer Reformed church, Chilton, will give the invocation. Assemblyman Carl J. Peik of Calumet county will give the address of welcome.

Five Progressive candidates for governor, Paul R. Alfonsi, Henry A. Gunderson, Orland S. Loomis, Philip E. Nelson and Harold E. Stafford, will give brief talks. James H. Mueller, chairman of the Sixth district Young Progressives, and Walter D. Corrigan, Sr., Cedarburg, also will talk. The Rev. R. S. City Officials Confident As Softball Battle Nears

It looks like the city officials are riding for a fall in their annual softball battle with street department workers at Saturday's High Cliff picnic.

Last year's victory seems to have given the city hall inmates confidence—probably too much of it. The white collar workers this morning were rather vague about their lineup, while on the other hand the street department issued a complete batting order. "We'll all play at sometime or other," the desk owners stated in an offhand manner, as if a defeat was not to be considered seriously.

The city hallers will string along with their winning battery of last summer, Claude N. Greisler, deputy health officer, on the mound, and Clarence O. Baetz, sewage disposal plant superintendent, behind the bat.

The street workers announced this morning: H. Schabel, left field; Ted Albright, catch; Joe Schultz, first base; Tony Stark, shortstop; T. Thompson, second base; Louis Wolf, right field; Max Ferrer, centerfield; Otto Refka, pitcher; Francis Bachmann, left short; Lawrence Reinke, third base; Archie Thomas, batboy; K. Prall, water boy.

The party will make preliminary examination of applicants and forward them to Milwaukee for enlistment. It is stated in the bulletin that "vacancies exist in many sections of the country and present excellent opportunities for young men to advance their education."

The party will carry with it as display equipment an anti-aircraft searchlight.

Citizens by naturalization must present certificates to this effect at the boundary. American tourists may enter and return without any specified documents. In case they are asked to show papers to establish identity and residence, the following are helpful: old passport, birth or baptismal certificate, voters' certificate, tax bills, personal letters, auto or drivers' license and similar papers.

Citizens of other countries who are permanent legal residents of the United States should secure a re-entry permit from United States Immigration and Naturalization service before leaving this country.

Hay Fever May Strike Harder

Unusual Moisture, Hot Weather Favor Growth of Plants

Hay fever sufferers may find the going a little harder than usual this summer, Dr. F. J. Huberty, city physician, said this morning.

The more than ordinary amount of moisture this year, plus the recent hot weather, is likely to make growing conditions for ragweed, goldenrod and other sources of irritation better, Dr. Huberty said.

The real hay fever season will not begin here until sometime in August, for the common type of fever. The affliction hasn't struck at all yet to his knowledge, the city physician said, although there may be isolated cases in the city.

Radio Station Wins Tilt Over Use of Records

U. S. Court Decides Author's Approval Is Not Necessary

New York—AP—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in a far-reaching decision, has ruled that radio stations are entitled to use phonograph records without the permission of the manufacturer or author of the record.

The National Association of Broadcasters took a silent part in the test case initiated after the RCA Manufacturing company, Inc., and Paul Whiteman obtained an injunction against the WBO Broadcasting Corporation, operators of Station WNEW. The corporation was enjoined from using Whiteman recordings because use allegedly violated a ban on broadcasting which appeared on the face of the record.

RCA and Whiteman contended that broadcast of the recordings provided competition which was likely to reduce the demand for the original playing by the person or group whose work was recorded and that they should be paid for the privilege of broadcasting the recordings.

Regular Fees Only

Colonel Joseph M. Hartfield argued for the broadcasters that the radio stations were bound to pay only the regular copyright fees to the composer and publisher of recorded music.

The appellate court agreed and vacated the injunction holding that the ban on broadcasting which appeared on the face of recordings had no legal effect.

Colonel Hartfield explained that the effect of the decision "is to say that when a radio station buys a record it has the right to play it."

When a radio station or network plays a phonograph record, the regular copyright fee is covered by the blanket license broadcasters obtain from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, which makes no distinction between recorded and live performances.

State Agencies Cooperate in Spring Tree Planting Program

Cooperation of many agencies in the conservation department's reforestation program last spring resulted in the planting of more than 28,000 trees, enough to start forests for the future on 2,000 acres of Wisconsin land, according to C. L. Harrington, state superintendent of forests and parks.

The work was carried on with the help of counties using WPA and CCC labor as well as men they employed directly; the university college of agriculture and county agents carrying on shelter belt work; AAA committees through federal aid to farmers who agreed to undertake reforestation; and conservation clubs.

The number of trees planted during spring operations and Outagamie and other counties in this area were: Outagamie, 57,000; Waupaca, 268,875; Winnebago, 25,500; and Calumet, 7,600.

Federal Men Ask for Five New Employees

Elimination of Fifth Lock at Kaukauna Is Proposed at Hearing

Kaukauna—A request for the employment of five additional men on the Kaukauna locks and the elimination of the Kaukauna fifth lock were two of the proposals presented at the public hearing held in the council chambers here yesterday.

The hearing was conducted by Colonel Charles J. Taylor of the engineer corps of the United States Army, stationed at Milwaukee, and assisted by E. M. Nisen, Milwaukee.

The petition for more men on the Kaukauna locks was made by the American Federation of Government Employees. They stated that such an addition would mean five full shifts on duty at all times on the five locks rather than three at night and four in the daytime. They added that it would speed up navigation and eliminate a safety hazard as the men have to run back and forth between the locks over rough banks.

The question of eliminating the fifth lock at Kaukauna has been before the war department for several years and the request was renewed yesterday by representatives of navigation companies and by the lock tenders also.

Save Money
Ben G. Prugh, Kaukauna of the Fox River Navigation company told the examiners that the elimination of the fifth lock would mean an annual saving of $3,000 to his company while A. J. Coffey of the Cook and Brown company, Oshkosh, placed the saving to his company at $4,000.

Three farmers from Princeton asked that something be done on the upper Fox river to eliminate the flooding of their lands each year. They suggested dredging of the river with removal of the trees along side the river and also the sand bars.

William C. Forrest of Portage requested the Fox river be dredged near Portage to permit navigation on that part of the river, declaring that the river in several spots was about six inches deep. He also asked the removal of numerous sand bars in the upper Fox.

The city of Kaukauna through Lester J. Brenzel, city clerk, suggested several projects which would keep the lock tenders and maintenance men employed for a full year.

Suggests New Wall
These projects were the building of a retaining wall on the north end of the canal from the first lock to the guard lock. He also suggested that the stones be removed from the tail race of the government dam to allow for a quicker run of the water.

Mayor William J. Gantter backed up the requests of City Clerk Brenzel and asked that the retaining wall be started from the west end of Tourist park to the first lock. He also requested the widening of the street between the Thilmany mill and the canal, adding that part of the road was owned by the government.

Arthur Wheeler, a lockman for the war department suggested that there could be better navigation if the men could be hired for a full year rather than for the navigation season of approximately nine months, because in the winter time the lock tenders and maintenance men could make repairs and inspections of the locks to correct any mechanical failures.

He told the examiners that the pay for the men averaged between $800 and $900 a year and that the men did not want to be thrown on relief during the winter months when there was work that could be done on the locks.

Presents List
Jack Hilgenberg, Kaukauna, a lock tender for the government, presented a list of 60 suggested improvements, drawn up by the American Federation of Government Employees.

General projects to be done on every lock and dam on the lower Fox river included: the installation of power operation on each lock to make for more speed in passing boats through the locks and safety for the lock tenders; the running of all sewers from lock houses on government property into the city sewers or the installation of cesspools; the installation of a definite dredging program for the upper Fox and Wolf rivers to aid in flood control and to make channels suitable for navigation; and the installation of a communication system between the

Majority Opinion Against More U. S. Regulation of Business

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—The present strength of Wendell Willkie, far from being a mere accident of politics, is part of a basic trend in American public thinking—a trend which began as far back as 1937. That trend is toward greater acceptance of the leadership of big businessmen in national affairs, and it represents a fundamental change in the sentiment toward business which was current in the early days of the New Deal. Nowhere is the change more clearly revealed than in a nation-wide survey just completed by the Institute.

The survey shows that there is comparatively little sentiment left in the nation for greater regulation of business in the interests of reform. That fact may have an important bearing on the presidential campaign of big business. It indicates that New Deal broadsides against business which proved effective in the campaigns of 1932 and 1936 may be less effective in 1940.

The survey probed opinions on two issues—regulation of business and regulation of labor unions. A cross-section of voters in all areas and in some levels was asked: "During the next four years do you think business should be regulated to a greater extent by the Federal government?"

Those expressing an opinion voted as follows:

Yes 33%
No 67%
Approximately one voter in six (17 per cent) had no opinion.

The second question was: "Do you think labor unions should be regulated to a greater extent by the Federal government?"

On this question those expressing an opinion voted:

Yes 75%
No 25%
Roughly one person in five (18 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The results indicate that more than twice as many voters favor greater regulation of labor as favor greater regulation of business.

Attitudes toward the subject vary sharply, however, by income groups. About half of voters in the lower income brackets are for greater regulation of business, as compared to less than one-fifth in the upper income group. However, all economic groups even those made up predominantly of skilled and unskilled labor—are in favor of greater union regulation.

The results do not necessarily mean, however, that the public would oppose wartime regulations of business, or special restrictions connected with military rearmament. What today's poll attempted to measure was simply the public's basic attitude toward general business regulation for reform.

The chief reason why the majority oppose further industrial regulation, the poll shows, is that the government has "already gone far enough and that further regulation would be 'too much like dictatorship.'" Those are the reasons given by voters themselves.

On the question of regulating labor unions, the general attitude expressed in the comments of voters is that "unions are too powerful and have gone too far," that many unions have become "rackets," and that regulation is needed to protect union members from "unscrupulous leaders in their own ranks."

Merit badges for proficiency in certain subjects were presented to Marvin Trettin for public health, first aid, and personal health; and to Richard Wandell for athletics and physical development.

Anton Miller to Talk At City Union Meeting

Terms and Maneuvers for Peace

Peace can never be made by speeches. Hitler and Halifax understand that even if a large share of the public does not.

Germany would be glad to rid itself of this war without an inch of the British Empire or a shilling of British money.

But it is entirely proper for England to ask a great many questions about other nations since their control by Berlin is of vast importance to London.

What are to be the peace terms with France, Belgium and Holland? What does Hitler propose to do with Denmark and Norway? And there are still the Poles and Czechs.

Herr Hitler on the platform at Berlin and Churchill or Halifax at London can never even outline a peace treaty, if that is what they are trying to do, by mere oratorical efforts.

Will Hitler drop substantially all his gains to keep the Polish Corridor and Sudetenland? What beyond will he require. Forthright answers to these questions may determine the course of the present war, but such answers will only be forthcoming after numerous other questions are answered. What is the real strength of the Berlin-Moscow axis? Is Russia moving to the north and south according to a carefully arranged plan written last August? Is the Kremlin really trusted by the Reich? Or will Moscow in its greed and dread be moved to strike at the formidable foe towards whom it is now acting so chummy?

England has information in respect to many propositions it does not divulge to the public. So has Germany. But neither can be altogether sure of what will be revealed by the next turn in the road. They must make decisions with something of the feeling of uncertainty with which a pinch hitter is sent into the game in the ninth inning.

What should America's attitude be toward peace, and what is it actually? Is it molded or shaped by London? Should it be or should it consider America's material interests alone?

Now that we are over the hysteria of Hitler crossing the Atlantic when we see him practically beg for peace rather than attempt to cross the Channel our faculties may be released from their thrall to decide that a peace is better than a continuation of a war and that, if we have any diplomats left they could be used to ascertain precisely upon what terms the combatants may be induced to send their soldiers back to civilian tasks.

"Revolution—Why, How, When?"

Robert Hunter is a radical who has been an intimate and associate of Lenin, Rosa Luxembourg, Bebel and other revolutionaries. He has written a book delving deeply into revolutions, what causes them, how they are fomented, encouraged or stimulated and how those who devoutly pray for them may assist in creating the conditions that result in the great explosion.

Mr. Hunter's observations and his conclusions are not as foreign to America and American conditions as some might think. He quotes Lenin to an effect that should be read by our supersensitives:

"There is no subtler, no surer means of overturning the existing basis of society than to debauch the currency. The process engages all the hidden forces of economic law on the side of destruction, and does it in a manner which no one man in a million is able to diagnose."

Utopians have always wanted to play in the treasury. Those who love the cheers of the thoughtless are usually deeply attached to diluting the money of a people, perhaps buying silver for twice what it is worth and issuing debts to a dizzy height.

Other observations of Mr. Hunter should not be lightly passed by:

"Lenin taught the white, black and red terrorists of Europe a simple and effective technique for acquiring supreme power which in a score or more of great nations in the world today we are witnessing what the state can become when no group of citizens is strong enough to oppose it. In these nations the state . . . takes from the worker all his products except the little required to feed, clothe and shelter him . . ."

"In all periods of history when society is paying a heavy penalty for its sins of war, misgovernment, speculation or rebellion, countless ingenious methods of relief and avenues of escape are proposed by those wise in their own conceit. The heyday of the charlatan arrives. The fallacies of the old days are revived, and panaceas have an almost unbelievable power of attraction for weak governments and shift politicians."

Probably it is not necessary to fit this cap to any particular head but few will doubt upon what head it would appear most becoming.

The First American Census

The University of Texas has an asset of priceless value consisting of the compilation made by the census takers who started out in the year 1570 at the command of King Philip of Spain to count his "loyal subjects" who, indeed, bent the knee reverently when the name of royalty was mentioned.

This collection of census reports is of incalculable value because of its age, the many sorts of paper upon which it was written and the material facts that were collected in every Indian village that had by that time become included in the colonial domain called New Spain.

But the report has another value in respect to comparing the questions asked by rulers in 1570 with those asked by governing authorities in 1940. And the comparison is advantageous to the present day. It proves that if our government today has a long nose Philip had a monstrously protruding snout.

Even then the king desired information as to the family income, how much taxes each family unit paid, what they paid taxes on and what with. A total of 150 questions faced every family head and must have bewildered the stout but simple red men who so often endeavored vainly to comprehend white purposes and cooperate with their white rulers without, however, being subtle enough to see that the royal person who controlled them, and the viceroys who executed his regal will, were concerned primarily with their own proud positions.

Texas may take all the distinction belonging to the possessor of so unique a compilation but care should suggest that it boast not too loudly of owning the first census taken in this land. It is more than likely that those highly civilized races who lived on this continent in bygone ages and left structures of surpassing beauty and utility had also felt the pressing urge of "civilization" to gather together the many details relating to the humans who composed their nations.

And that one of the dominant purposes in counting noses was in the remote past, as now, to find purses, estimate income and prepare new levies, who can doubt?

Each Gets Help From the Neutrals

Hitler's gain from Belgium, Holland and Scandia is two-fold—food and flying fields.

But England also gained by his attack upon the little neutrals and in a rather wonderful way to carry on a long drawn out war.

For it now appears that these countries had sent out their gold reserves prior to the Nazi invasion. Norway has 84 million dollars in gold in New York, Denmark 53 million, Belgium 626 million and the Netherlands 690 millions. Here is nearly a billion and a half in gold, a tremendous war chest that may now be made available for more guns, ships and airplanes.

In addition, England secured some excellent cruisers from Holland and practically all the seagoing tonnage of these countries, a tonnage much greater than the size of the nations indicates. Thus the Reich and its enemies each gained what each wanted. The Reich got food but it will not last forever. England got gold and ships, and neither will they last forever.

Why France Went to War

Recently the United Press in Paris advised this country that as a great crowd of French prisoners was taken past the American Embassy in Paris with haggard faces and torn clothes several of them shouted at the Embassy:

"Look at that American flag! Look at that American! He looks well fed. Why in hell wouldn't he help us?"

We wish to politely refer the inquiry, which is a very material one and should be answered, to the White House. For it was the White House that issued the promises and led these French people into the belief that we would help them in swinging the hammers of war.

But the thunderbolts from the White House were empty. They were only stage lightning that will have to remain that way,—until after the election.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

STRENGTHEN US, LORD

Strengthen us, Lord, for all that is to come. Build in our souls the vast reserves of faith In the unerring right of the solved sum. Free us from bitterness and fear of death.

Give us staunch hearts to bear the heavy blow. Help us remember that a thousand years Are minutes of Your time. We may not know In a whole life that ours are healing tears.

Lend us your courage that we may grow strong To bear heartbreak and change, to walk new ways.

Strengthen us, Lord, and make our vision long That we may look ahead to better days.

Some statisticians figure that the modern woman secretary must have a knowledge of 871 miscellaneous duties, 250 of which she performs daily.

One-seventh of all the Indians in the United States live in Arizona, where one of every ten persons is an Indian.

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

Washington—The private White House plan is for a three-man command to take the place of Jim Farley as campaign generalissimo.

Head of the contemplated triumvirate will be Senator Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina, who will hold the title of national chairman. One of the ablest strategists in politics, Byrnes will be of tremendous help in placating ruffled regulars misfired by the third term and Wallace's selection.

Because of the pressure of his congressional duties, Jimmy won't be able to devote all his time to running the campaign. So two other party chiefs will be brought in to assist him.

One is Frank Walker, wealthy lawyer and chain movie theater owner, who is an ace at money-raising but a washout in the hurly-burly of politics. Walker is one of the most likeable men in public affairs, but he dreads the limelight. He has told Roosevelt, to whom he is devoted, that he will help in the campaign in any capacity, but he does not want the chairmanship. So the plan is to use Walker where he can serve best, behind the scenes with some such title as executive director.

The other man is handsome Ed Flynn, Bronx boss and former New York secretary of state. Flynn will handle the big eastern voting centers, which he knows intimately.

Also in the cards is a housecleaning of subordinate national committee personnel.

Although re-elected for another term at Chicago, "Chip" Robert, secretary of the committee, is slated to be replaced by an official more acceptable to the new leaders. "Chip," popular and charming, doesn't stand very strong with the inner circle.

HITLER'S AIR STRENGTH

From the latest war department figures on Nazi air strength, you can get some idea of how tough a proposition the British are up against in warding off Hitler's air attacks.

Not counting the Italian air force, the Germans have about 26,000 airplanes and are turning more out at the rate of about 2,000 a month. This is in contrast to the British airplane strength of between 6,000 and 8,000 planes.

All reports indicate that the British planes are of better material, and that British pilots are better trained and willing to tackle overwhelming odds. In the long run, however, numbers count, and Hitler probably could afford to lose more than 10,000 planes attacking England and still not feel the consequences.

FRENCH REPUBLIC?

When July 14, which is Bastille Day and the French Fourth of July, rolled around this year, the protocol division of the state department was in a quandary.

For Bastille day celebrates the establishment of the French Republic, and the state department is supposed to leave congratulatory cards. Now that the French Republic has fallen, the protocol division did not know whether to leave cards marked "P.F." meaning "pour fell-citer" (to congratulate), or to leave cards marked "P.C." meaning "pour condoler" (to condole).

In the end, the state department played safe. It left cards with no initials at all.

TOBACCO SMOKERS NOTE

How anxious the justice department is to crack down on the big tobacco companies for price-fixing is indicated by the fact that the department is not waiting for the regular October term of the Kentucky grand jury to convene.

Instead, justice department officials are swearing out a bill of information before the federal courts, in which they swear certain information regarding price-fixing to be true, and to be in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Chief charge leveled against the big tobacco companies is that they combined to fix the price paid to the tobacco farmer, also that they fixed the retail price of cigarettes paid by the consumer.

The justice department has been investigating monopolistic practices in the tobacco industry for two years. Among other things its investigators have found that the annual income of 400,000 tobacco farmers in the United States averaged only $400 to $500. Meanwhile the officers of the Reynolds Tobacco company alone have paid themselves a total of $28,000,000 during a five-year period.

MINTON'S SPEECH

Scores of speeches were made and reported during the Chicago convention, but the only one that really made GOP strategists sit up sharply was one by Senator Sherman Minton which completely escaped public notice.

The Indiana New Dealer delivered his talk before a large Negro rally in South Chicago, and fired a round at Wendell Willkie where politically it hurts.

Minton told his colored audience that Elwood, Ind., the Republican standard bearer's home town, had agreed to allow Negroes to participate in Willkie's acceptance ceremony only after a strong undercover pressure from GOP leaders.

Up to a few years ago, Minton said, Elwood had large signs at its city limits warning Negroes to keep out. Also colored railroad workers were not allowed to get off trains to buy food in the town. Minton even promised to produce the signs.

Minton's charges created a stir among his listeners and next day were all over the large Negro section of Chicago, which controls a lot of votes. For several years it has elected the lone Negro in congress, the present incumbent being Arthur Mitchell, who has held the office for three terms.

Note—The Negro vote can swing a close election in such key cities as New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, and Detroit.

U. S. AIRPLANE ENGINE LAB

Fifty-seven cities are bidding furiously for the new $8,400,000 airplane engine research laboratory to be built by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

NACA officials won't reach a decision for several weeks, but you can mark it down as definite that a midwestern city, probably in the Great Lakes region, will be chosen as the site. Chief factor being weighed by the NACA is vulnerability to air attack.

Other considerations are: (1) accessibility to engine manufacturers; (2) proximity to an industrial center where skilled labor and technical supplies are available; (3) adequate power and water supply.

At least five cities which want the airplane laboratory fulfill these specifications—South Bend, Chicago, Indianapolis, Detroit and Cleveland. Others being considered are Dayton, Milwaukee, Buffalo, and Columbus.

Strongest point in favor of Indianapolis—considered the best bet by insiders, with South Bend second—is the fact that the big Allison liquid-cooled engine plant is located there. Army and Navy officials are keenly interested in the further development of liquid-cooled motors because of their higher speed and horsepower.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington — Things to be remembered about the Chicago convention:

In spite of the stampedede which Wendell L. Willkie's unique method of political blitzkrieg started at Philadelphia, no one at Chicago made any effort to duplicate it. James A. Farley did do a lot of lobby-hopping, but it was nothing like Willkie's lone wolf prowls on the hunt for delegates. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler generally was around his headquarters, receiving delegates and friends. Sen. "Jimmy" Byrnes was accessible when you could catch him, but that was about as simple as catching a bat on the wing. Paul V. McNutt dropped into his palatial headquarters occasionally to pose for pictures. But Willkie still is the one-and-only when it comes to upsetting the traditional apple-cart of convention campaigning.

Ladies' Hats In Ring?

It was Sen. Alva B. Adams, the Coloradoan, who dug up that 44-year-old plank in the Democratic platform of 1896, that "no man should be eligible for a third term of the presidential office." If he had gone back to 1912, the first convention that President Roosevelt attended, he would have found a plank favoring a single term for the President. Platforms reflect the issues and the threats of the day. In 1912, the threats to the Democratic party were both President Taft and former President Theodore Roosevelt.

There was flutter, mostly feminine, about Rep. Mary T. Norton of New Jersey being a possible vice-presidential candidate. Congresswoman Norton, after laughing it off with the statement that she didn't think it time yet for a woman to cast her hat in the ring for the vice-presidency, said: "That time will come although perhaps not for 10 or 20 years."

Those Jittery Polices

Not even political conventions are free of the practical joker pests. One stuck a firecracker into the vest pocket of one of the delegates and lighted it. It was just outside the door of the Stadium entrances and the speed with which the police descended on the unfortunate victim is a demonstration of how jittery we are these days.

"Gosh," one of the coppers said to me, "we thought it was an assassination."

Whenever my modesty threatens to desert me about this pillar of type, I recall that it took a little more than a million words a day to keep you all informed of what went on at the conventions. Of course, no paper can carry a million words. The special correspondents and the duplicating services to various papers and groups of papers accounted for the vast verbiage.

Nearly everyone I talked to at the convention agreed that it was the pressure of delegate and public sentiment that forced Roosevelt into the statement he made through Sen. Alben Barkley. The convention had bogged down as if wading in a swamp and the delegates were miserable and lifeless. The powers that be insisted they had to have a jolter and frantically pleaded with FDR to give it to them.

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

The New York police department is being organized for defense, as are the police forces of many other cities. And it's a grand idea. I'd just like to see Hitler trying to get past the average cop.

However, more interesting just now than most war news, is a discovery that the department of agriculture has perfected a midge watermelon. It is small enough to be handled in the modern bungalow kitchenette without removing the wall.

In fact it even fits into an electric icebox and can be taken on a picnic without being strapped outside the car.

Watermelons have always been too big for comfort, but nothing was ever done about it until the Democrats got in. And I understand the demitasse watermelon is Wallace's first gun in the campaign for the vice presidency. I wouldn't be surprised if Roosevelt came out with a seedless blackberry.

But the Republicans ain't asleep. That fellow Willkie is pretty smart and by August he will have an ear of corn that will come with swivel and towel attached.

Name 'Dixie' Traced

To Pre-War Banknote

Houston, Tex.—A New Orleans bank may have been responsible for the term "Dixie," applied to the land below the Mason-Dixon line.

Henry E. Elrod, Houston engineer, believes that the Citizens Bank of New Orleans was the originator. The bank's 10-piastre notes, issued in 1852, were printed half in English and half in French. On each note was the word "Ten" and the corresponding French word, "Dix."

Southerners called the bills "Dixies." In those days, states issued their own money. The New Orleans bank was prosperous and its notes circulated widely throughout the South which came to be known as the land of the "Dixies," and finally, Dixieland.

The Burned Child—

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — One of the most vital factors in modern politics, but one which rarely comes up for candid public discussion is the importance of money in campaigns.

Even in the relatively limited sphere represented by a campaign for a state elective office — say, governor or U. S. senator — the amount of financial resources required deters eligible candidates from running in almost every election year.

Running for office means complete neglect of the candidate's business or profession. It means the outlay of many thousands of dollars in addition for the paraphernalia of modern politics, publicity men, advertising accounts, radio time, campaign managers, headquarters rent, literature printing and distribution, and other necessities.

There is at least one man in Wisconsin politics today who would immediately be recognized as an outstanding contender for a major office, a man who eagerly desired to become a candidate, but who has been unable to enter the contest for lack of funds. There is another who waited for several months before making his announcement of a candidacy, and who is worried now that he will not be able to compete with his opponents because of a slender purse. Another man publicly admitted a few days ago that the expense of a campaign might be a deterrent. He was D. J. Kenny of West Bend, who spoke at a meeting in Oneida, Outagamie county, last Sunday.

That is not to infer that money has an improper influence in Wisconsin politics. It is only to say that running for governor or senator requires more money than many men are able or willing to spend on the gamble. The experienced politician will tell you that $10,000 is a modest estimate of the expense incident to a candidacy for either office.

JUDICIAL CAMPAIGN

Capitol friends of Judge Arnold Murphy of the Marinette circuit court have several times heard that Murphy is considering a candidacy for the state supreme court next spring in the event that Judge Chester Fowler, whose term is expiring, is not a candidate for reelection.

Judge Fowler, however, has yet given no public intimation of his plans.

NO LUCK

Some capital Democrats during the last week conceived the notion that one of the best available Democratic candidates for governor in sight this year would be Edgar G. Doudna, prominent schoolman and long-time secretary of the state board of normal school regents.

Doudna is one of the best known townsmen and after dinner speakers in Wisconsin, and one of the most successful. A humorist add weight to a Democratic ticket. The Doudna boom looked impressive for a few days, until some Democrats thought it would be wise to consult him about it, and were informed in short order that the subject could muster no enthusiasm whatever for the idea. Reason given was that resignation from his state job to undertake a political campaign would mean a sacrifice of Doudna's benefits under the teachers' retirement act.

TRICHINOSIS

Trichinella spiralis, commonly called trichina, is a small round worm less than one-fourth inch long in the adult stage. It is a common intestinal parasite in the rat. The hog becomes infested by eating rats. Larvae of the worms penetrate the hog's stomach wall or intestinal wall and so get into the lymphatic channels and into the blood stream and are carried to all parts of the body. The larva in the hog's muscle or other tissues become encysted. Man eats the pork, insufficiently cooked to kill the encysted larvae. So the pork eater becomes infested.

The cyst is dissolved in the stomach or intestine, the larva set free and it grows into the adult worm in a week, more or less.

At this stage, the setting free of the larvae in the stomach or intestine of the pork eater, if the infestation is large, that is, with a great number of the larvae, the victim suffers nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, pain in abdomen, sudden feverishness. In the course of a few days to a week the larvae develop into adults and begin migrating into the tissues. With this stage the victim suffers characteristic muscle pains and tenderness, with continued irregular fever, prostration, anemia, and in many instances a peculiar heaviness or edema around the eyes.

Some pathologists believe the hog is the important host of trichina, and that the parasite would not survive in the rat if hogs were not fed the uncooked offal from slaughterhouses or the carcasses of dead hogs.

Microscopic examination of pork is the only way to detect the presence of trichina. This is impossible in the routine federal inspection of meat.

Thorough cooking destroys any trichina in any meat. This is the protection on which the public must rely.

Probably many cases of trichinosis have been mistaken for typhoid fever, acute indigestion, mushroom poisoning, ptomaine poisoning, and in the later stage of rheumatism.

Diagnosis of trichinosis rests on the symptoms mentioned, with a rather characteristic increase in the proportion of blood corpuscles which take an eosin stain in the blood examination, a positive skin reaction to vaccination with trichinella antigen, (a water extract) in some instances discovery of the parasites embedded in bits of muscle obtained by puncture and examined under the microscope.

Formerly it was assumed that trichinosis is rare in man in this country, perhaps five to eight per cent of the population being infested at one time or another. Recently recognition of mild cases, readily escaping recognition, has led physicians studying the question to conclude that perhaps 25 per cent or more of the population may be infested at one time or another.

strong appeals in their quest for what is essentially an unspectacular and unimportant state office. George Greeley of Oshkosh, however, who recently announced his candidacy for the job as a Republican, appears to have hit upon an idea which is worthy of attention. The state treasurer, he maintains, should be more than a clerical col. of the governor's advisory council, a real part of the administration, says Greeley, whose point is pertinent now because for the last ten years at least the state treasurer's place in the state capitol has been relatively innocuous, that of a routine collection agent.

Pork, ham, bacon, sausage is excellent food, but for health's sake see that it is always thoroughly cooked and never take chances on raw or underdone pork.

Heavy infestation with trichina may prove fatal. In most instances the illness is only painful.

Best remedy for the illness seems to be from one-half to one teaspoonful of tetrachlorethylene followed in two hours by salts.

Allergy

Is eczema included among the conditions caused by allergic sensitivity to certain foods or other things? If so, please give me some advice on how to deal with it, for I have frequent outbreaks of eczema, as I call it, for which there seems no apparent cause. (C. P. J.)

Answer—In many instances eczema is of allergic character. Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for "Relief for Allergy."

B Complex and Digitalis

Recently you spoke of vitamin B complex, I think, as preferable to digitalis in some cases as a heart tonic. The enclosed clipping of an article in South. Med. & Surg. seems to bear you out. Congratulations on your up-to-date column. (W. H. M.D.)

Answer—Thank you, Doctor. The physician who contributed the article to the medical journal says vitamin B along with digitalis gave more strikingly beneficial results in many cases than digitalis or other medicines alone. I believe it will be found that supplementing the diet with an adequate amount of vitamin B complex daily improves the heart action in a more lasting way than any medicine can, in many cases.

Edisons Win After Rally

Defeat Plywoods to Tie for First Place in Senior Men's Loop

New London—With an 8-run rally in the fourth inning the Edison Woodshop trounced the previously undefeated Plywood team, 8 to 3, in a Senior Men's league game last night. Both teams are now tied for first. Pitchers Ken Palmer and Scott Hazelberg with able support hardly let more than three Plywood men bat per inning. Carl Haese accounted for 8 of the 18 outs and made half of them unassisted.

The Edison took a 3 to 0 lead in the third inning off the tosses of Gordon Zaig. Clarence Kroll finished on the mound. The losers got one run in the fourth on an error and two in the fifth on walks.

Luft's Sluggers won on a forfeit from Beckman's All Stars, leaving the latter alone without a win.

The Edison Office will seek a 3-way tie for first place with a win over the Methodist Men in the final game of the second half next Tuesday evening. The two teams have a similar meeting to make up before the Plywoods can claim the first half title.

The Paper Schemes

The paramount question is how soon, if ever, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie or both will begin to tell the people the truth about the national defense. The people are not being told the truth. They are being dazzled and diverted by grandiose authorizations, appropriations, contracts, plans, promises, and commitments. These are the easy things to which politicians invariably resort when they lack the resolution to do the hard and necessary things. Placed as we are in this country today, the supreme problem in foreign policy is to clarify and define the relationship of the United States to the British commonwealth and to British sea power: the subject is treated by the politicians of both parties as unmentionable. Internally, the supreme problem of national defense is to increase rapidly the rate of industrial production in the munitions industries; since this cannot be done without inconvenience to every one and without interfering with the vested interests of business men, trades unions, and consumers, the subject is regarded by the politicians as untouchable.

Because we are drifting aimlessly and failing to define our foreign policy or seriously to organize the national defense, we are deceiving ourselves most dangerously by a series of paper schemes in which the second scheme covers up the defect of the first and the third scheme covers up the defect of the second.

The underlying paper scheme, our first and fundamental departure from the reality of America's vital interests, was the neutrality law. Even as amended last autumn, the law prevented the United States from acting to preserve in friendly hands the naval control of our two ocean frontiers; the neutrality law committed us to the immense gamble and the immeasurable risk of allowing British and French sea power to be destroyed, and of having, therefore, to let ourselves be isolated and compelled to defend ourselves in two oceans with one navy.

Paper Schemes Torn By German Conquests

The conquest of France and the threat of the conquest of Britain tore a hole in the paper scheme of the neutrality law. The country reacted immediately. Thereupon, congress and the administration pasted another piece of paper over the hole. They authorized another navy. But the whole of the paper navy was that it could not be constructed in less than four or five years, and that was an optimistic estimate. So over this hole in the scheme for a paper navy, another piece of paper had to be pasted. A great army is to be authorized in order that we may be able to defend by land and air forces those vital positions in this hemisphere which the navy alone, should Britain fall, is now unable to defend. But the great hole in this scheme for a paper army is that while a million men can be conscripted and given rudimentary drill, they cannot be equipped with modern weapons much before 1942-1943.

For American industry and American labor are not now geared to produce these weapons rapidly, nor are serious and effective measures being discussed publicly, much less put into effect, to begin producing these weapons rapidly. Paper contracts are being signed. But the real task of putting the production of munitions ahead of everything else, ahead of private profit, private preference, ahead of all peace-time reforms and all peace-time restrictions, has not begun. And neither political party and neither candidate has as yet dared to go to the people and tell them truthfully what sacrifices they must make if they are to translate any of these paper schemes into a dependable armed force.

The grim truth about the national defense is that by failing to use our whole diplomatic and economic power to insure ourselves against the conquest and collapse of the British Empire, we are compelled to authorize another navy which cannot be built before it may be needed, to authorize a great army which cannot be equipped before it may be needed, and to make pledges and commitments to our neighbors in this hemisphere which may not be valid if we lack the navy and the army to execute the pledges. And then, because the politicians are afraid to tell the people the truth, they are organizing the productive capacity of the country as if they had years of leisure ahead of them and as if no stringent measures were really necessary.

We Have Not Learned Lesson From European War

We are still going down the same road which all the other democracies have taken. We have not learned the plain lesson of their disasters. Our political leaders will not speak the truth for fear of shocking the voters. They will not speak the truth for fear that their opponents will make a demagogic attack upon them. They will not call capital to the colors; they are afraid to disturb the unwakened business men. They will not enlist labor for the national defense; they are afraid to ask the necessary sacrifices of hours, wages and peace-time restrictions. They will not give the national defense priority over private consumption; they are afraid of the voting consumers.

They do not read the signs of the times; they read the Gallup polls. And they choose invariably those policies which promise much eventually and cost little immediately—as for example, the promise of a two-ocean navy and the promise of hemisphere defense. But they avoid the hard measures, such as coming to terms with the British nations because that would run into political prejudices, such as mobilizing capital and labor because that would call for real sacrifice to make real the big schemes.

It is difficult to imagine why any man should now wish to be elected president unless he had behind him

Case Records of a Psychologist

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

If you are fearful that you are losing your mind, be sure to read today's discussion, and you'll probably find the cause of your trouble mentioned below. Thousands of nervous breakdowns occur every year simply because the victims don't know the basic facts described herein. Zoe is a beautiful case of a potential nervous breakdown.

CASE R-123: Zoe V., aged 23, has been a private secretary for 4 years.

"But I am on the verge of a nervous breakdown," she exclaimed, and then began to cry.

"Oh, Dr. Crane, I'm losing my mind! Everything around me seems to be moving in circles.

"And I have such pressure in my head that I am afraid it is going to explode.

"Oh, I know I am going to die! I simply can't go on like this, I'll never get well. Please, Dr. Crane, won't you help me?"

DIAGNOSIS: Don't think that this is a silly nitwit, for Zoe has had two years of college and is a very efficient secretary making $45 per week. Her employer thinks she is indispensable.

Besides, I get plenty of male patients who are as disturbed and hysterical as she is. This emotional outbreak is not restricted to women.

Let's handle her case briefly and bluntly. She isn't losing her mind at all. Besides, you can't lose your mind simply by worrying over the matter.

Your mind is just as much a part of you as your right hand. You could worry from now till doomsday about losing your right hand, but that very worry would never cause the hand to wither or drop off.

Neurosis Vs. Psychosis Zoe has a neurosis, not a psychosis. The latter refers to insanity. But even an emotional tangle like Zoe's can disrupt the happiness of one's self and family, or cause one to lose his job.

A neurosis is often a safety valve, so to speak, by which a person procures some relief from the tension of a tremendous conflict. When an irresistible appetite or desire, encounters an immovable set of moral habits, the force of the encounter is partially shunted off by way of neurosis.

Big Game Hunting Hunting for the cause of a neurosis is like hunting wild game. You first go to the spot where you will be most likely to find the lions or the bears, the quail or the rabbits.

What kind of irresistible appetite is most likely to encounter a strongly entrenched set of moral habits?

It isn't likely to be the gastric appetite, for you can dine at any hour with or without benefit of Emily Post's wise precepts, and still be respectable members of society.

The sex appetite is usually at the root of the neurosis. But that is a blanket diagnosis. We want to know specifically what type of sex dilemma is making Zoe's head swim and her brain feel as if it is going to explode. These are common indications of an emotional conflict.

The A-B-C's of Diagnosis What are the usual taboo sex situations? Adultery is one. Homosexuality is another. Auto erotic practices comprise a third. Sodomy is a fourth. Purposive abortion is a fifth. Incest makes up the sixth, and non-commercial prostitution completes the group of commonest sexual causes for a neurosis, if we ignore the menopausal complexes.

But there are variants of the above and many virtuous persons become worried not because they have actually indulged in any of those taboos but because they have only imagined doing so.

Zoe's entire trouble is a combination of Number 3 above, plus the fact that she is engaged to be married, and is afraid her prospective mate will find out, even if she doesn't confess, and will hate her if she does.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs when you seek personal advice or one of his psychological charts.)

Let Experience Teach Them Fathers and mothers face such things as philosophically as possible and usually with angelic patience, but when those same young things protest that "mother makes such a fuss about doing the least thing," it is asking too much of human nature not to retort, and sharply.

The only thing that teaches such young people is experience. It is hard for fathers and mothers to stand by and see their children make such grave mistakes, but until those children learn that help comes through their own efforts and by no other way they do not grow much. In time life catches up to them but in the meantime they have made life for their fathers and mothers a burden grievous to bear. Maybe if they took a good look at themselves shadowed here, they might improve a little faster.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

What kind of thinking lies behind such waste and such imposition of burdens upon other people? Father and mother set aside money for the insurance, the taxes, and the new car; and dad has been waiting for now for years, and the bill for daughter's taxi or son's teeth comes in and must be paid.

Bid Right But Cards Laid Wrong

By ELY CULBERTSON

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: the following rather interesting hand brought about considerable discussion, and we should like to have you settle a few of the disputed points for us. "West, dealer."

"The bidding:

West North East South
Pass 1 diamond Pass 3 clubs (1)
Pass 3 diamonds (2) Pass 4 no trump (3)
Pass 7 diamonds (4) Pass Pass

"As you see, East held four diamonds to the jack, and the queen of clubs was a doubleton, making seven clubs or seven no trump club.

"(1) North questioned the jump response without adequate support in diamonds, since a two club bid would have been forcing for one round and could be followed if necessary by a force on the following round. North might conceivably have held:

xxx ♥ K Q J x ♦ K Q J x x x ♣ x

"(2) Lacking support in clubs, North made a minimum response until he received further information from South.

"(3) Since diamonds was the only suit rebid, North maintains a four no trump response at this point establishes diamonds as the suit and assures adequate trump support even had there been any doubt of it in the original jump take-out.

"(4) At this point South insists the correct response is five no trump since a seven diamond bid shuts out a seven club bid. North while admitting that five no trump would be correct, contending that the four no trump showing the ace-king of clubs and ace of spades provides a discard on the club king for the only apparent loser in the hand, the small heart, and that whatever response South would make to a five no trump bid, he would go to seven diamonds, so there was no object in making that bid. Since this hand was at rubber bridge, without a warning from South of unfavorable distribution, and with 100 honors in diamonds, there was no advantage in a seven no trump contract. What say you?—D. W. Wis."

This is just one more argument based largely on a misapprehension. Because the diamond jack could not be captured and the club queen could be, the partners have jumped to the conclusion that seven clubs would have been the better contract. The table of probabilities does not agree with this notion. Actually it was about seven to three that the diamond suit would run without loss, whereas there was only a 50-50 chance of shutting out the club queen.

As to the specific arguments for and against each bid, well, the fairest thing to say is that every one of them was persuasive. It is true that a jump take-out usually connotes a "fit" for partner's suit, but in this case South hardly can be blamed for attaching great value to his own eight card club suit and spade ace.

He shaded the technical requirements for his jump take-out, but only by a "plus value." After the three club bid, the other bids had to follow more or less automatically.

North's reason for "skipping" the technical response to the four no trump bid carries unimpeachable logic and, all in all, the partners should consider themselves more the victims of a malign fate than of their own ineptitude.

My Neighbor Says—

Deep planting is a common mistake when setting out peonies and is often responsible for their failure to bloom. They should be planted in well-drained soil in September.

To clean fireplace bricks, cover them with a paste made of powdered pumice and household ammonia. Let it dry for an hour, then scrub with warm soapy water.

After removing the tough portion of the center of a grapefruit and separating the pulp, place an after-dinner mint in the center of each half and chill. The mint gives the grapefruit a delicious flavor.

To keep paint fresh in uncovered cans fill them to the top with water, after stirring the paint thoroughly. When needed pour off the water with care.

Beauty and You

WATER-PROOF MAKEUP—Adelaide Mahalic, water nymph, tests a new waterproof make-up by ducking her face in a bowl of water. The moisture-resistant cosmetics keep her beauty intact!

Have you ever dreamed of the day when you could emerge from a refreshing swim with your prettiness as beautifully intact as when you dive into the water? Of course you have if you like the water, and now it seems as if that one dream can come true. For a prominent beautician has just introduced a new sunproof, waterproof make-up!

She says it was the girls of the famous water show of the World's Fair which inspired her to create these new aids to merrimakers. Those glamorous nymphs came to her in desperation seeking a make-up which would stay with them as they carried on the show, diving in and out of water.

The velvety base of this swim-lasting make-up is a water resistant foundation lotion (or cream if your skin is very dry). Its formula is such that it conceals minor blemishes and its smooth mat finish is highly favored.

Over this goes a fine-textured, compressed powder, of a shade to match your current season's skin tone. This too is as repellent to water as a duck's back and if you don't believe it drop some into a bowl of water and see what happens!

One would think that a lipstick would be the beautician's Waterloo—but no—she mixed a vivid shade of a creamy mixture which does not smear even during a dead man's float! And the new mascara is so indelible that it clings to your long lashes until it is removed with gill!

Hair No Problem Some bathing beauties are so beauty conscious that they like to swim without a bathing cap. For them there is a brilliant hair groom to be brushed on the length of the hair to keep it glossy despite salt water and sun.

Such an artifice is nice for an occasional effect but it is far better to cover the hair with a suction cap. Naturally the World's Fair show girls would find this special pomade a great help, for they wear no caps to protect their heads and set their hair between hourly couldn't be expected to shampoo shows!

So down to the sea for you with a pretty face which will still be pretty after a thorough ducking! Orchids for the salon that has answered thousands of maidens' prayers!

If your local cosmetic counter cannot supply you with this new make-up, Miss Lindsay will inform you where it might be bought. If you write her, enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope, for her reply.

Women More Apt to Seek Divorces Than are Men

By DOROTHY DIX

A correspondent wants to know, speaking by and large and taking things generally into consideration, which are more prone to divorce—men or women? This is a question that cannot be answered right off the bat, because while statistics show that women constitute the great majority of petitioners in divorce cases it does not prove that there are more good wives than there are good husbands, or that men are any more happy and contented in the holy estate than are women. Probably there are just as many husbands as there are wives who long for a decree absolute, but custom has decreed that a man shall not smear the name of his children's mother, and so, even when he is innocent of any wrongdoing and she is guilty, he permits her to get the divorce. It is the last gesture of gallantry in a hard-boiled world.

Taking marriage as a whole, it is just as hard on men as it is on women. Just as many men as women have love's young dream turn into a nightmare. Just as many women are high-tempered and grouchy and cantankerous as men. Just as many women are poor cooks as there are men who are poor providers. And marriage is as little an Elysium for husbands as it is Dorothy Dix for wives.

But, as a general thing, men stand the matrimonial gaff better than women do. They take the disillusionments of marriage with more philosophy. They endure their wives' faults with more patience than their wives show to their failings. And, while complaining of their husbands is the favorite indoor sport of many wives, it is a rare thing to hear a man publicly criticize his wife.

The general antipathy of men to divorce has a curious illustration in the fact that even very few of the men who are unfaithful to their wives want to divorce them or break up their homes.

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the philanderer only wants to have his fling and to be free to roam at will and make light love to any pretty woman who happens along. He wants to feel that he is a devil among women. He wants the thrill of pursuit and the hazard of adventure. But he also wants his wife, his home, his children and, least of all, does he want divorce.

Perhaps men don't want to get rid of their old wives for the same reason that they cling to their old coats and their old slippers, because they have become adjusted to them and are used to them. Perhaps it is because men are conventional and conservative and dread scandal. Perhaps it is because a wife is a protection against the gold-digger. Perhaps it is the thought of alimony that deters them. But, whatever the reason, men are few divorce hunters.

Men may break the spirit of the marriage bond, but seldom of their own accord do they back the letter. And, if the matter rested with them, there would be comparatively few broken-up homes and half-orphan children. It is the women who keep Reno a going concern.

All of which should be comforting to wives. But is it?

Even in the cases where a marriage is a failure and where the home has become nothing but a battle ground on which the husband and wife fight continuously it is nearly always the wife who pulls down the roof over their heads and smashes the furniture and starts for the divorce court.

Another reason why men are not so quick to throw up their hands and quit as women are, when they realize that their marriages are not all their fondest fancy painted, is because they have been taught to respect their contracts and to stick to their bargains; whereas women have been brought up in the theory that if you don't like what you picked out when you get it home and look at it you can return it.

Whereas, with a man marriage is only part of the business of life, and if that fails him he has consolation prizes in his ambitions, his career, his business in which he can absorb himself. He can flee from a shrewish or a nagging or a homesick wife to his office as to a temple of refuge.

Another reason why men are not so quick to throw up their hands and quit as women are, when they realize that their marriages are not all their fondest fancy painted, is because they have been taught to respect their contracts and to stick to their bargains; whereas women have been brought up in the theory that if you don't like what you picked out when you get it home and look at it you can return it.

Whereas, with a man marriage is only part of the business of life, and if that fails him he has consolation prizes in his ambitions, his career, his business in which he can absorb himself. He can flee from a shrewish or a nagging or a homesick wife to his office as to a temple of refuge.

Young Outfit

By ANNE ADAMS

Perfectly "suited" for early autumn and on through winter is this jaunty suit! Anne Adams has planned Pattern 4505 to be used as either a jacket-and-skirt or a two-piece dress, depending upon your fabric.

The flared skirt is made in simple circular style. Just see how trimly the matching or contrasting top fits, with its darted-in waistline and curved edges. There's a nice yoke in front, with decorative darts below, and a choice of long or short sleeves. The rounded collar has a youthful appeal; the revers-style gives a more tailored effect. Novelty buttons look light-hearted on this vivacious outfit for college or working girl.

Pattern 4505 is available in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16, jacket, takes 12 yards 39 inch fabric; skirt, 21 yards 39 inch fabric.

Send your order to Appleton Post-Crescent Pattern Department, 243 West 17th St., New York, N. Y. Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

All of which should be comforting to wives. But is it?

Even in the cases where a marriage is a failure and where the home has become nothing but a battle ground on which the husband and wife fight continuously it is nearly always the wife who pulls down the roof over their heads and smashes the furniture and starts for the divorce court.

2,800 Missing in Ship Disaster, London Says

London —AP— Authorized sources said Thursday that 2,822 persons were missing in the sinking of the Cunard liner Lancastria at anchor off St. Nazaire during the evacuation of British troops from France.

There were 2,477 known survivors of the 5,300 aboard. Others, however, may have saved themselves by swimming or wading ashore, and falling into German hands.

ing, 5,104 tons were sunk. The damaged ships totaled 5,133 tons, of which one 534-ton ship had to be beached.

A fleet of nine German mosquito boats also approached the coast to attack the convoy, the admiral said, but was driven off by two destroyers and two motor torpedo boats.

The mosquito boats escaped in a smoke-screen. But as the destroyers were returning from the attack they twice were subjected to bombing and as a result were damaged.

The admiralty also disclosed that 57 were killed and 23 wounded in the torpedoing and sinking of the British destroyer Whirlwind, which it announced was sunk July 8.

An air ministry communique last night, admitting that five British planes were lost during the day, said that "hour after hour from dawn to late this evening" British fighter planes—Spitfires and Hurricanes—tackled large forces of German bombers.

In one instance, the communique said, six Spitfires attacked a formation of 30 bombers escorted by at least 50 fighters.

Berlin —AP— The German high command announced today that 15 merchant ships totaling 63,000 tons were destroyed by German warplanes in raids on British shipping lanes yesterday.

In the course of continued raids on British shipping a number of "hectic fights" occurred, the high command said.

Total British air losses yesterday were 23 planes against 9 German planes missing, it was said. (The British reported 28 German planes shot down yesterday, as compared with 5 of their own.)

Despite bad weather, the German air force raided British air-ports in central England and attacked radio stations at Dover, the high command said.

No military damage was done by continued flights of British bombers over northern, western and central Germany during the night but five British planes on these missions were brought down by anti-aircraft fire and night chasers, the communique said.

guaranteed safe passage while the Germans, he added, said they had guaranteed no such thing.

Informing that reports were circulating that because of British blockade activities the United States might extend the combat zone, from which American vessels are barred, to the Iberian (Spanish) coast, Mr. Roosevelt remarked that was about the last channel of communication left and it would be kept open as long as possible.

Chairman Bloom (D-N. Y.) said today the house foreign affairs committee had approved unanimously a bill to permit the use of United States vessels to remove refugee children from European war zones—an arrangement President Roosevelt described as possible.

Under the bill each vessel so used shall have painted plainly on both sides an American flag "and a statement that such vessel is a refugee-child rescue ship of the United States or under United States registry, so that night or day there can be no mistake as to the identity of such vessels."

Also any American vessel to be used for child rescue work must have its safe conduct granted by all nations at war.

When Senator Reynolds (D-N. HIGH TIDE

By Frances Hanna

eyes brilliant with emotional rebellion. His fingers sought keys and a glorious, rushing flood of music filled the old house from cellar to rooftop. He played on and on with the hunger of a man breaking fast. It was as if a torrential sea of music deluged the house and its inmates, drowning out the pettiness of everyday troubles, breaking the bonds of little slave worries, sundering the chains of everything mundane, laying bare the inner spirit of all existence with the sheer, awful magnificence of sound.

He stopped playing as suddenly as he had begun.

"It has come back to me," he whispered in a tone of prayer. "At last I've found my soul!"

Still in a trance, not even seeing the white-faced huddled figure at the top of the stairs, Derek picked up the bundle of sketches and went out in the night.

Jan woke late, sat up and peered from her window. The sky was overcast, gray, depressing. No sound disturbed the quiet of the house. The tin alarm clock announced the hour to be eight-forty. Either she'd forgotten to set the alarm, or it hadn't wakened her, she thought. At all events, Norma must have prepared her own breakfast. Queer that Derek hadn't knocked on her door before now with a demand for food.

Suddenly she remembered their quarrel, and its aftermath. Remembered she hadn't heard him come in last night even though she'd lain awake hours, miserable and wretched and remorseful, repenting the horrid scene. She shouldn't have lost her temper and flared out at him like that. And she had been wrong. He had repudiated her accusation of failure by losing a flood of vital, living tone. He had told her with his fingers of his recovery, of his gift reborn. He had been a conqueror playing his own triumphal march: "I'll find him and apologize, with trummings," she promised.

Lakes by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Crane of Weyauwega.

After spending three days with Waupaca County relatives Mrs. Starr, Miss Starr and Miss Crane left Thursday for Chippewa Falls. Mr. and Mrs. George R. Lindsay of Hendersonville, N. C., who have been visiting relatives in Waupaca county and in Appleton since June will leave the coming week for their home.

herself. She jumped out of bed, looking about twelve years old in her pink, flowered pajamas and tumbled curls. Neptune lifted his head to stare at her curiously, decided breakfast was not too imminent, and burrowed his nose once more under the plume curtain of his tail, keeping one eye open, however.

His mistress certainly appeared upset about something this morning, he observed in his sphinx-like fashion. She seemed to be having a difficult time deciding what to put on. Much as he loved her he thought her very foolish and feminine of late. Arising used to be a matter of jumping into those blue pants of hers, giving her hair a lick and a promise, dousing her face with cold water and hurrying to cook breakfast.

He sighed an inaudible cat sigh. Recently life had become increasingly difficult. She powdered and painted and fussed with her hair, and sometimes changed clothes two or three times before she was satisfied.

"Neppy," she said, tickling the furry white patch under his chin. "stop glaring at me like that, you fickle animal. This is the first time in weeks you've deigned to sleep on my bed. Didn't Derek allow you on the roof last night?"

On the way downstairs, sedately accompanied by the cat, Jan rehearsed her speech of apology. Going hesitantly into the kitchen she found it empty, everything neatly in place as she'd left it the night before. Norma must have taken her breakfast in a cafe. Maybe, Derek was waiting on the roof for her call to breakfast.

But he was not on the roof and an examination of the tent showed his bed had not been slept in. Distressed, more worried than she would admit, she began the routine duties of another day, hoping he would turn up before long. He didn't.

Not until the afternoon mail brought an air mail letter postmarked San Francisco did she realize, with raw sick terror, what had happened. For the letter was from Derek.

"Dear young mariner: You've done your penance, so I'm removing the albatross from round your neck. I'm en route to New York by plane, ready to storm the citadels. If I can do it you'll hear from me again, but not until I've abandoned my tight little castle of self-pity. I took your sketches for good luck. Thanks for everything, puss.

Derek, the Salvaged." She read the bold, scrawling letter over and over until they blurred, Derek—gone!

There wasn't time even for a good cry. Lance rang for service and then there was marketing to do and dinner to prepare and dishes to wash. When it appeared she would at last find a moment alone, Johnny and Rose sought her out with disturbed and annoyed faces.

Rain and Hail Storm Causes Much Damage

Chilton—A severe hail and rain storm accompanied by a high wind, occurred Tuesday afternoon. The storm lasted less than thirty minutes. It came from a northwesterly direction and went southeasterly and seemed to follow a path about a mile wide in the town of Brothertown on the east shore of Lake Winnebago. Trees were uprooted, doors were blown off barns, grain laid to the ground, and much damage was done.

The corn on the August Nickel farm was riddled to shreds, much of the grain was also destroyed by the hail; fruit trees were split in two, a large berry patch was laid to the ground. Other farmers suffered losses similar to those of Mr. Nickel. Arthur, the ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kopf, received a compound fracture above the knee of his right leg Saturday. He was struck by the pole of a wagon that was being pushed into the shed on his father's farm and thrown to the ground.

2,500 Attend Band Concert, Aquatic Show

Music, Life Saving Demonstration, Fancy Diving Feature Event

Neenah—Spectators crowded in to all available space at the new swimming pool last night to witness Neenah's first combination band concert and aquatic show. It was estimated that there were more than 2,500 present.

The concert was presented by Conductor Lester Mait's junior and senior Neenah High school bands, and the aquatic show was staged by Ole Jorgensen's crew of life guards and three fancy divers. Jorgensen, who is supervisor of the pool, and Paul Stacker, manager of the recreation center, were in charge of the aquatic show, which, despite the fact that there were signs of threatening rain, attracted a crowd which compared in size as well as enthusiasm to that which attended the pool's dedication program. The gallery and bleachers were packed and spectators stood around the edges of the pool.

Dedicate Numbers

The program got underway with the band concerts. The senior band dedicated two of its selections, one to Mrs. Helen K. Stuart and the other to William Gore. Mait explained that Mrs. Stuart is the "original band mother" and that Gore, a member of the band, is ill. The life guards gave a demonstration of life saving, going through the complete and fatiguing routine outlined by the American Red Cross's life saving service, with Jorgensen explaining the various phases. This part of the program resembled a 3-ring circus, for the guards were diving in pairs and stationed at three locations in the pool, providing "trifling" seats for the spectators. The guards who performed were Al Sturges, Dean Sword, Richard Meyer, Donald Bentzen, John Donovan and Eugene Calloway.

An exceptionally good performance in fancy diving was presented by three Twin City divers. They were Kenneth Westberg, Menasha, who was Midwest intercollegiate champion while attending Lawrence college; David Bukysk, Neenah, diving coach at Menasha High school; and Vernon Jensen, Neenah, champion of the senior division in the recent swimming meet.

Westberg gave a performance of championship calibre, while Bukysk and Jensen did some double diving.

Neenah Youths Plead Guilty of Burglary

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau Oshkosh—Two Neenah youths, Lawrence Miller, 21, route 1, Neenah, and a 16-year-old companion, pleaded guilty of burglary this morning before Municipal Judge S. J. Luchsinger. The judge took sentence under advisement until July 30.

They admitted entering the Racht filling station, on Highways 41 and 45 about six miles north of Oshkosh, and taking candy and cigarettes, early Wednesday morning. County police questioned them after noticing them about the place Wednesday noon, and the youths confessed.

Open Bids in Sale of Abandoned Buildings

Neenah—The council committee on parks and public buildings at a meeting last night at city hall opened bids on the sale of the two buildings at the abandoned Fresh Air camp.

The committee voted to recommend to the council the acceptance of the bids submitted by Richard D. Lange of $25 for the small building and Dwight Plucker of $50 for the large building. Four other bids were submitted. The committee also decided to replace the shingled roof on the city hall with slate, and City Clerk H. S. Zemlock was requested to draw specifications and advertise for bids.

Two Cars Damaged in Collision at Neenah

Neenah—Automobiles driven by Miss Jean Flury, Oshkosh, and Fred Muenzel, 925 Riverland avenue, Neenah, collided at 5:20 Thursday afternoon on N. Commercial street at Forest avenue. Both machines were going south on N. Commercial street when the accident occurred. The left front fender on the Flury car and the rear bumper on the Muenzel machine were damaged.

Postpone Game

Neenah—The softball game between the Pete and Andy Tavern team and Gilbert Papers of the Industrial league was postponed Thursday night because of wet grounds.

The Twin Cities office of the Appleton Post-Crescent for its editorial, circulation and display advertising departments is located at 510 N. Commercial street, and the telephone number is 4100. News items, copy or orders for display advertising and orders for subscriptions may be left at the office or telephoned. Orders for classified advertising should be placed by telephoning 543 in Appleton, and the cost of the telephone call will be rebated. The Twin Cities office closes at 7 o'clock in the evening.

DON'T BE ALARMED; JUST A DEMONSTRATION—Although the above scene has all the indications of an actual drowning, it is only a demonstration performed by lifeguards at Neenah's new pool before more than 2,500 spectators at last night's combination band concert and aquatic show. Al Sturges is the victim and John Donovan is performing artificial respiration. Ole Jorgensen, supervisor of the pool, is applying the inhalator, and Dean Sword is standing at the right. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

Naleway Fans 22 as Reds Win in 16-Inning Battle

Menasha—The league-leading First ward Reds scored a 2 to 1 victory over the second-place Second ward Blues in a 16 inning game in the Junior Baseball league Thursday afternoon at the Menasha baseball park.

Ambrose Naleway, husky hurler for the First ward, allowed only five hits during the entire 16 innings and fanned 22 while issuing two free tickets to first. Len Schipferling, on the mound for the Second ward, allowed 10 hits but was effective with men on base until his support gave way. He fanned 14 and walked seven and hit one batter. The First ward had only one error to two for the Second ward.

Naleway retired the first nine men to face him but in the fourth B. Kluba singled and stole second, L. Schipferling walked, and Ciske and Baldauf followed with singles to score one run. The next batters went out in succession, L. Schipferling singling in the twelfth with two out. Another Second ward player got on base by a walk in the fourteenth while in the fifteenth L. Schipferling singled again but was caught in a double play. An error put a Second ward player on base in the sixteenth but he was out attempting to steal.

The show will be restricted to Kennel club members. Entry fee will be 50 cents for each dog and $1 for three dogs. Awards will be presented in all classes, including best of show.

Plans for the club's field trial, which will be held Sept. 14 and 15, were outlined. The trial will be for pointers and setters and it will be held in the vicinity of Neenah.

Committees which were in charge of the club's annual all-breed show at Fond du Lac July 4 submitted reports on the event. Discussion was conducted on next year's summer vacation dog show circuit in Wisconsin. Thirty-seven members attended the session.

Money Will be Made Available for Needy Students at College

Neenah—A student loan fund has been adopted by the board of directors of the Neenah Rotary club, it was announced by J. H. Holzman, principal of Neenah High school, at the noon meeting of the club Thursday at the Valley Inn.

Members of the loan fund committee of the Appleton Rotary club, after which the Neenah plan is patterned, attended the meeting and conducted an informal discussion. Holzman announced that the Neenah loan fund was formulated by a committee composed of S. N. Pickard, chairman, A. W. Anderson, and himself.

Loans will be granted by the club to residents of Neenah or to graduates of Neenah High school, according to the announcement, and the total amount to be borrowed will not exceed $250. One per cent interest will be charged the recipient until he graduates from college, and then a rate of 5 per cent will be charged.

Must be Endorsed

Loans preferably will be made to juniors and seniors in college, according to the plan, and they must be endorsed by some responsible person, preferably a parent or guardian. Students who apply for loans must interview the three members of the committee and all three must favor the loan before it is granted.

The source of the fund will be from voluntary donations by members of the Rotary club and other individuals and such funds as the board of directors shall see fit to earmark according to the announcement.

On the committee from the Appleton club were L. J. Marshall, chairman, S. C. Rosebush, treasurer, Donald DuShane and Walter Miller.

Marshall told the Neenah Rotarians that Appleton has had no losses as he described the procedure in granting loans. DuShane said the success of a fund depends upon the men who administer it.

Shortly after Fritsch's application for a license was turned down by the state, Judge Hughes refused to issue an order of restraint against Fritsch prohibiting him from continuing in the dairy business, as requested by the state. South America's Support Won't be Enlisted Easily

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Out of the widely ramified activity concerning western hemisphere defense—military, economic and political—may be evolving a new kind of international organization. The goal apparently is a regional association which would be less binding than a federation but which would have more force and cohesion behind it than the league of nations.

Germany, Russia and Japan are establishing regional organizations by conquest or pressure. The United States is undertaking to organize the western hemisphere on a quid-pro-quo basis. We are offering military and economic support to Latin American nations in return for their political co-operation.

As to military support, we are offering the most elaborate defense program in our peacetime history. We are offering our first peacetime conscription proposal. It is no secret to Latin American republics that we are rushing preparations in order to have troops available at the earliest possible moment for expeditionary service wherever it might be needed in the western hemisphere.

The navy is refitting some destroyers for fast emergency transport service. It has just purchased two steamships from South American countries. Secretary Hull at the Havana conference has indicated the willingness of the United States to assist in creating facilities for the handling of surplus goods which are breaking the backs of several South American countries. In this the United States would carry the burden of financing.

Plain Purpose is to Keep Hitler Out of Hemisphere
In return for these economic and political services, the United States seeks the political co-operation of Latin American countries in stabilizing and protecting the whole western hemisphere from encroachment. The United States asks the other American countries to join in creating a collective trusteeship to maintain the integrity of the Monroe doctrine. The chief purpose of this proposal is to provide a joint inter-American organization which could take over, at least temporarily, western hemisphere possessions of European powers in cases where the owners had last contact.

This refers principally to possessions of Great Britain, France and the Netherlands. Transfer of such possessions to control of another non-American power is deemed dangerous to the integrity of the western hemisphere. Western countries would create a governing authority to administer such possessions in the interest of all of the Americas.

The plain purpose of all this is principally to keep Hitler out of the western hemisphere, and to prevent his exercise of remote control on this side of the Atlantic.

United States Must Shoulder Biggest Load
As the United States is the strongest and richest of the western hemisphere nations, we have the largest interest in preserving the Monroe doctrine. The chief burden of economic and military countries have been indifferent, and in some instances hostile, to the Monroe doctrine. They have direct economic interests in European markets, and at the same time have encountered difficulty in marketing their products in the United States.

Their co-operation in political protection for the western hemisphere is not gained easily. Only the strong inducements of adequate military and economic assistance are likely to bring it about. That is the crux of our western hemisphere problem. Without the political co-operation of the South American continent, or of a substantial portion of it, our military and economic aid become largely futile.

If this cooperation is received, then there are the beginnings of a regional association of western nations which may provide the mechanism by which free and independent countries can pool themselves into the kind of continental bloc which seems essential to survival in these times. This is indeed a lonely world for the nation which tries to stand alone.

As the United States is the strongest and richest of the western hemisphere nations, we have the largest interest in preserving the Monroe doctrine. The chief burden of economic and military countries have been indifferent, and in some instances hostile, to the Monroe doctrine. They have direct economic interests in European markets, and at the same time have encountered difficulty in marketing their products in the United States.

Their co-operation in political protection for the western hemisphere is not gained easily. Only the strong inducements of adequate military and economic assistance are likely to bring it about. That is the crux of our western hemisphere problem. Without the political co-operation of the South American continent, or of a substantial portion of it, our military and economic aid become largely futile.

If this cooperation is received, then there are the beginnings of a regional association of western nations which may provide the mechanism by which free and independent countries can pool themselves into the kind of continental bloc which seems essential to survival in these times. This is indeed a lonely world for the nation which tries to stand alone.

The plain purpose of all this is principally to keep Hitler out of the western hemisphere, and to prevent his exercise of remote control on this side of the Atlantic.

SUNDAY'S GAMES
Little Chute at Greenville Merchants.
Black Creek at Appleton (postponed to later date).
Nichols at Galesburg.
Shiocton at Greenville Grange.
Freedom at Dale.

Little Chute—Six teams are tied for second round honors in the Outagamie County league with one sure to be eliminated when Freedom meets Dale at Dale. Little Chute will trek to Greenville to battle the Merchants, Nichols to Galesburg and Shiocton to Greenville Grange.

The Shioctons have been the second round surprise so far but suffered a reversal at the hands of Galesburg last Sunday. Miller will take the mound against Greenville Grange at the latter park Sunday. The Grangers will have Schweitzer on the hill with K. Falk receiving. The Grangers lost a tough battle at Freedom last Sunday afternoon in the final inning after having the game on ice, 3 to 2. A double and a single chased across the winning run.

Freedom will go to Dale to clash for top honors. Both won their game last Sunday with the former beating Greenville Grange and the latter beating Little Chute. Sherman Kapp tied up his own game with a double and scored the winning run on a single by Vic Dieckman. Kapp again will be on the hill for Freedom with Shorty Plamann receiving. Poppy is expected to be on the hill for Dale with Cornell receiving. Mervin Glocke was the hero of the Dale aggregation last week with a timely triple with the hazzacks loaded and scored the fourth run with a steal home. Dale only got four hits in all but they were timely.

Nichols with Nichols
Nichols will invade Galesburg and feels it can continue its winning streak. It registered a 3 to 2 win over Black Creek last Sunday. Joe Fitzgerald, formerly with New London in the Northern State loop, took the mound for the Nichols aggregation and set down his former mates, the Crekers, with six hits. He will appear again Sunday. Lefty Neuman will face the invaders. Neuman set down Shiocton with three hits last Sunday. Hilliker and Blink were the big guns in the Galesburg attack with three hits each. J. Krull will be on the receiving end of Fitzgerald's curves while Nelson will do the receiving for the Gales.

Little Chute A.A. will clash with Greenville Merchants at the latter park. The Merchants dropped a close game to Appleton with each moundman allowing four hits. Manager Trauba of the Merchants uncovered a new moundman in Tony Natrop and he will face the Chuters again Sunday. Schultz will be on the receiving end. The Dutchmen lost two games last Sunday with Black Creek defeating them for the first half championship at Freedom in the morning and Dale in the afternoon. Snooky Van Dyke will toss for the Dutchmen with Roy Jansen receiving.

Black Creek and Appleton have agreed to postpone their tilt at Appleton to a later date under lights.

Kayak II, Challedon Are Gold Cup Choices

Los Angeles—(AP)—Ten or more candidates are expected to be named today for the big race of the Hollywood park season—the $50,000 added Gold Cup handicap tomorrow at a mile and a quarter—and Kayak II and Challedon hold firm as the public choices.

The probable starters include these two champions, Can't Wait, Viscosity, Advocate, Hysterical, Wedding Call, Specify, Joy Boy, Filisteo and possibly Gentle Savage.

Kayak II captured the 1939 running of the Gold Cup but remains something of a mystery for the 1940 edition. He has not raced since he trailed Seabiscuit to the wire last March in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap.

10 Big Ten Stars Catch on With Minor League Teams

Urbana, Ill.—(AP)—The Big Ten conference, long a source of talent for professional baseball, this year has sent 10 of its 1940 stars into the minor leagues.

Illinois and Iowa contributed three apiece, with Minnesota, Ohio State, Indiana, and Northwestern adding one each.

Three players—Jim George of Iowa, Stan Sowa of Minnesota, and Don Gentil of Indiana—have reached Class AA ball. George is seeing duty, mostly in pinch-hitting roles, with Syracuse of the International league. Sowa and Gentil, both pitchers, have caught on with Minneapolis and Milwaukee, respectively, of the American association.

New London—Seymour came over and shook a big stick in New London's face and willed the undefeated High Lifes to the tune of an 11 to 4 slugging victory in a Northern State contest under the lights last night. The result puts the two teams into a tie for first place.

Nine men faced pitcher Tip Krohn in the second inning as the Seymours collected six hits and two walks for six runs, an advantage the locals could not overcome. Kakkak took over the mound for the High Lifes but the visitors still found the apple to gain five more runs, three home runs hits featuring the slugfest. Zaidmiller hit the first homer on Kakkak's first pitch in the third and both he and Lamers knocked the pill out of the park, one after the other, in the fourth frame. Lamers batted 1,000 with four for four.

New London managed only half as many hits, all scattered singles off Kelly's pitching. Three men got across the plate in the third on three walks and a couple of bingos. Three hits in the fifth netted the only other tally.

Sunday night Manitowoc will play here.

Varied Occupations Provide Grid Training

Iowa City—(AP)—When Iowa's gridiron candidates return from their summer jobs they're going to have a wide assortment of experiences to exchange.

Among some of the jobs taken by vacationing griders are steamfitter's helper, pneumatic hammer operator, bank messenger, ditch digger, insurance policy rater, road oiler, and in one case—handy man on a farm.

Other former Big Ten men in organized baseball are Mark Kilmer, Ohio State pitcher, with Evansville, and John Goldak, Northwestern hurler, with Springfield, Ill.

Of the three Illini, Bill Hapac is making the best showing to date. Signed by the Detroit Tigers after graduation, Hapac now is playing the outfield for Evansville of the Three-Eye league. John Pacotti, ace of last year's hurling staff, is on the mound for St. Joseph of the Michigan State league, a Class C circuit. Al Vitacco, the third Illini, is holding down third base for Jonesboro of the Northeast Arkansas league.

Groundwork for Good Golf

6. Apply Putting Fundamentals

Every golfer can become a good putter if he will grasp an understanding of the mechanical fundamentals and apply them as best suited to his individual requirements. There will always be a difference between putters since some have a better eye and a more sensitive touch than others. This should emphasize the value of a sound putting method. Putting and short approaches are specialty shots that could almost be separated from the rest of golf. The putting grip is the key to a sound method. I recommend hand placement that has the back of each hand parallel with the putter blade, both thumbs on top of the shaft. This permits swinging the putter head from the wrist joints in a true backward and forward manner. The left hand grip is firm, an almost palm hold with greatest pressure exerted throughout the stroke by the smallest two fingers. This hand is responsible for direction. The right hand grip is light with the club held entirely in the fingers. The right controls, the distance. The left elbow is slightly squared to aid in keeping the stroke in line. In putting, especially on the longer putts, the short putt is more firmly struck and possibly more of a tap or hit than a swing. The putter blade should always be kept reasonably close to the ground. The grip can be either plain or overlapping. Take care in placing the blade at a right angle to the line of address and try to maintain this position throughout. Do not rely solely upon your personal ideas in improving your putting, as professionals usually suggest something beneficial.

Rain Keeps Madison Idle in Three-I Loop

By The Associated Press
Three Eye league clubs will have a difficult time catching the pace setting Cedar Rapids club if the Red Raiders can continue to step up their power when needed as they did last night.

Last place Waterloo spotted the leaders a 3 to 1 lead then went ahead in the seventh 4 to 3. But in Cedar Rapids' half of the inning, Workman immediately put the Raiders ahead again with a four-run homer. The leaders settled matters with a six-run outburst in the following inning to win, 13 to 7.

Decatur, with a chance to climb from sixth to fourth place, lost to Evansville in the last inning, 3 to 2. Springfield continued to crowd second place Clinton by defeating Moline 10 to 9 for its fourth victory in a row. Rain kept Clinton and Madison idle.

Emmett Mortell entered the Industrial league hall of fame at Roosevelt school diamond last evening when he pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Coated Paper to give Fox River a 5 to 0 victory. The result knocked Coated Paper, last year's champs, out of first place and gave Fox River a tie for the lead with Chair Company.

Only three Coated players reached base, each of them getting walks. Mortell fanned nine. Bobby Diener hurled for the losers and gave up six hits while whiffing twelve and walking one.

Fox River scored its winning run in the second inning when Mortell singled, took second on a wild pitch and third on a pass ball. Pope grounded to Reider for an easy third out but Reider's throw was wild and went for a 2-base error, Mortell scoring on the play.

Fox River sewed up the game in the sixth as Murphy walked and Brockhaus bunted down the third base line. Heinie Rammer singled to right, scoring both runners and took second on the throw to the plate. Wegner singled to score Rammer.

Melvin Pope led off the seventh inning by popping one of Diener's pitches far into left centered field for his weekly home run.

Monday evening APCO will play the Coated with refreshments at stake. Both are Coated Paper company teams and a record crowd is expected to be on hand.

That Iowa Hawk Isn't Kind That Eats Chickens

Iowa City—(AP)—The hawk which is pictured on Iowa football wind-shield stickers is a red-tailed hawk, friends of the school are quick to point out.

A. J. Weber of Keokuk explains: "The Iowa team is not named after a chicken thief but after a noble bird which is of great value in keeping down the population of rats, mice, and insects. Therefore it is beneficial to farmers."

Pilot in Sinking Plane
From time to time, I think about the future of the flying art. In less than half a century, inventors and mechanical engineers have done wonders in bringing out mastery of the air, but a great deal is left to do.

Air lines have been opened across the Atlantic and across the Pacific. We can get from one side to the other in about one-fourth the time taken by a fast modern steamer going over the same route. The ocean airlines might make faster flights, but they are not trying for speed records. They want safety for the passengers, and to date there has been little misfortune.

As time goes on, there is no doubt that both speed and safety will be increased. You and I probably will live long enough to see flights across the Atlantic in less than eight hours.

Seaplanes, or flying boats, are being used to transport passengers. In case of a forced landing on the water, the passengers are much more likely to be saved than if they were in a land plane.

To this date, seaplanes have not been made in such a way that they could not be wrecked if forced down in a rough sea. I expect that sooner or later inventors will produce a plane which is proof against any such accident.

In my mind is an airplane with a sealed-in cabin, with the strongest of walls. If made with the greatest strength, I think such a cabin could stand the shock of striking the water after falling hundreds of feet during the worst storm. It might be so built that it could sink clear under water, then rise again, bobbing up like a cork.

Although seaplanes are best able to meet forced landings on the ocean, quite a number of aviators have lived after striking the water while aboard land planes. Among these is Lieut. Edgar Ryder of the Royal Air Force.

Ryder was aboard a Spitfire fighting plane when he fought a battle with a Heinkel bomber. Both planes crashed into the sea. Ryder found himself trapped in the cockpit of his plane, something like 30 feet below the surface. For a moment, he thought he could not save himself, but he leaped through an opening in the cockpit and rose to the surface. In a few minutes he was picked up by a trawler.

Pegler Finds Another Union Lead Convicted of Conspiracy

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Yesterday's contribution to the sum of wisdom revealed that Joseph Ozanic, the president of the Progressive Mine Workers, of the American Federation of Labor, was convicted of bootlegging in the federal court at Springfield, Ill., in 1924 and 1925, and that the present United States district attorney there is proceeding against him to collect $550 which Mr. Ozanic still owes the government on two fines. District Attorney Howard Doyle says Mr. Ozanic served three months in the Springfield city jail for his part in the great popular rebellion against the foul amendment, and there may be those who, remembering the temper of those times, will be more likely to honor than condemn Mr. Ozanic.

Less chivalrous, however, was the part played in the people's protest against prohibition by Mr. John Dempsey, who, on April 22, 1925, pleaded guilty to two charges of conspiracy in the United States district court, in Cincinnati, and was fined $1000, no part of which has been paid to this day.

Mr. Dempsey is now the international treasurer of the International Union of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, with headquarters in St. Louis, a position of great responsibility and power, and one which obviously calls for the highest moral character.

Mr. Dempsey's part in the case which resulted in the imposition of the fine involved a serious betrayal of public trust. He was a policeman on the Cincinnati force at a time when graft was rife in the department, and he was one of 30 policemen who were caught by federal investigators in a systematic shakedown of bootleggers.

Most of the faithless cops pleaded guilty, a few were convicted and Mr. Dempsey turned state's evidence, a copper who hollered copper on the cops. He, too, pleaded guilty, but, in return for his assistance the court, in imposing the fine, refrained from ordering that he should stand committed until it should be paid. Mr. Dempsey thus was permitted to walk out of court free to hew out a career for himself in the leadership of the American Federation of Labor, bringing to the service of labor with a capital L a character which had been capable of violating a solemn trust for personal gain and of violating the trust of his fellow conspirators for personal advantage, at their expense.

Dempsey Removed From Police Department

Removed from the police department, Mr. Dempsey returned to his trade, structural iron work, and became active in union affairs in Cincinnati. He soon rose to the position of business agent of local 44 in Cincinnati and became a power in the vice Employees' union and the crooked Stagehands' and Theatrical Employees' union.

As to whether Mr. Dempsey still owes the $1000 fine in the sense that he can be compelled to pay it, there is no doubt. The fine still stands against him on the record in the office of the clerk of the United States District court, and no statute of limitations can run against it. In similar cases, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been employed to determine the present ability of the convicted persons to pay their fines. If the F. B. I. reports evidence that the person is now able to pay, the civil division of the department of justice starts a civil suit for the money.

But because the judge failed to order that Dempsey stand committed, a complication occurred. When a convicted person is committed he must serve 30 days in jail before he may obtain his freedom by filing the pauper's oath. If he is liberated after 30 days by this process, however, he still remains liable for the full sum of the fine, if and when he acquires sufficient money to pay it.

Indecent to Remind Dempsey of His Fine

It would seem that Mr. Dempsey's fine was seriously intended to be a fine for there is nothing to suggest that the court was only fooling. But, in the meantime, he

Washington—(AP)—The state department announced Thursday that the army transport American Legion was sailing from New York for the Arctic ocean port of Petsamo, in northern Finland, to remove stranded American citizens.

Fish Rescued After Water Level Drops In Wisconsin River

Madison—(AP)—Fish trapped in pools along the Wisconsin river near Prairie du Sac because of a drop in the water level were being rescued Thursday by a squad of men from the Madison Fish hatchery.

B. O. Webster, director of the state bureau of fisheries, sent the squad to seine out the pools after receiving complaints from residents along the river the fish would die, unless removed.

The conservation department also plans to send men to Sauk City to take out dead fish caught in the shallows.

Fortune Poll Shows Willkie Gaining Votes

Roosevelt's Power In Sudden Decline, Lawrence States

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — Back in 1936 only two polls in America came near forecasting accurately the Roosevelt landslide. One was the Gallup poll and the other was the "Fortune" survey.

Today Fortune magazine which carries on a month-to-month poll, taken among all classes and income levels, shows Wendell Willkie running ahead of President Roosevelt in all sections of the country outside the solid south except one in the west where there is a tie.

The amazing thing about the Fortune poll is the sudden decline in the strength of President Roosevelt since the Willkie nomination.

If the entire country, including the south is included, the Roosevelt percentage is only 44 as compared with 49 a month ago whereas the "against Roosevelt" which was 51.4 per cent a month ago has jumped to 49.8 per cent since the Republican nomination. It is significant that Willkie's biggest percentages are in the west north central where they run as high as 57.6 as against 33.1 for Roosevelt.

A month ago in the west north central states, the same survey by "Fortune" showed Roosevelt as high as 47.8 whereas the "against Roosevelt" was 40 per cent and the remainder "undecided."

What is most revealing is the way the "undecided" or "don't know" answers of a month ago—that is before the Republican convention—have now melted away. In the whole country whereas 11.2 per cent answered "don't know" a month ago, this group shows only 6.9 per cent now.

Interviews
The questions are not sent out by mail by "Fortune," as the "Literary Digest" used to do, but answers are obtained by personal interviews through a marketing research organization of nationwide coverage.

Thus persons in all walks of life are interviewed and when the result is tabulated due weight is given to the proportion of voters in certain age or earning groups as well as to geographical considerations.

Any poll may admittedly show a margin of error of 2 per cent, and, of course, the campaign is young yet. All sorts of events and circumstances and utterances yet to be recorded may influence the voters on election day next November, but the fact remains that not in 12 years has there been any prognostications based on straw votes of a scientifically developed character which have shown a Republican nominee ahead four months before election day. Fortune magazine comments thus on its own figures:

"The geographical shift is, for practical purposes, even more striking than the total, for the president actually gained in the three sections of the south, where he did not need more strength, and his losses elsewhere were consequently greater than the total change indicates—greater and more damaging."

Willkie Gains
The breakdown, according to the nine census divisions, follows:

	For R. For W.
"South Atlantic	66.5 16.4
"East south central	64.8 11.1
"West south central	62.8 15.9
"Mountain states	39.9 39.3
"East north central	38.8 45.1
"New England	40.6 47.2
"Pacific coast	37.0 51.1
"Middle Atlantic	35.9 52.6
"West north central	33.1 57.6

The foregoing is a jump from last month in every instance for the Republican nominee including the south where however Roosevelt shows bigger gains arising out of the "undecided" groups. Where the total of the two percentages in the above columns do not equal 100, the difference is to be found in the uncertain or undecided groups.

Another aspect of the poll is the preponderant sentiment among voters of each party declaring that Roosevelt and Willkie were respectively the best choices that could have been made.

Incidentally only 5.8 per cent of the Roosevelt Democrats polled believe Willkie's election "would be a calamity" whereas of those Republicans who didn't want Willkie named, originally 21.5, say it would be

Department to Make Report On Cheese Grading Program

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — The state department of agriculture will begin soon the preparation of a report showing the results of the expanded cheese grading program authorized and paid for by the 1939 legislature, department officials said here today.

After a slow start in recent years, the state legislature a year ago inaugurated the most extensive state grading and inspection program in the history of Wisconsin agriculture when it provided for compulsory grading by state agents of all Swiss cheese produced in the state and greatly expanded the staff of inspectors and graders for the American cheese industry.

A special appropriation of $70,000 was authorized by the legislature for the purpose, and the state grading and inspection staff was increased by approximately 20 persons.

Although the state grading program has now reached a point never before contemplated, only about a third of the total American cheese

Heat Affects Quality Of Eggs, Hayes Says

Whether eggs are to be sold on the market or consumed at home, it is in most demand.

To preserve that freshness J. B. Hayes, state extension poultryman in a bulletin to County Agent J. F. Magnus, suggests that eggs be collected regularly about four times a day during hot weather.

"Cool the eggs quickly by spreading them out on a screen frame in a room that is low in temperature where there is plenty of moisture, but where there are no foreign odors or musty smells," Hayes says. "When the eggs are cooled they should be packed in cases which, together with the fillers, also have been cooled by holding in a cool room."

"If eggs are to reach market in the best condition, they also should be marketed directly and quickly, and protected against heat while in transit."

One of the surest ways of spoiling good eggs, Hayes finds, is to strap the egg case on the running board, on a hot day, while on the way to market. One other practice that is sure to make them "bad eggs" if they are not had already is to let the cases stand on the platform in the hot sun, or on a truck floor.

better to elect him than to have a third term president.

The Fortune poll is considerable of a surprise to folks in Washington who have become so accustomed to believing Roosevelt invincible as a vote-getter that this first scientific survey published since the conventions will come as somewhat of a shock to the New Dealers.

produced in the state is actually graded by state agents, it was reported. The balance is graded by the manufacturers under a special license system. Thus there remains a possibility of evasion of grading restrictions, it has been pointed out.

Some officials have discussed the advisability of asking the legislature for a compulsory universal grading law for the improvement of quality of Wisconsin dairy production, but it is felt that the huge expense involved would be a major obstacle and deterrent.

Officials of the department, however, consider state grading one of the most effective agents in the promotion of higher quality production and as a potent weapon in the fight against monopoly influences in cheese distribution.

Says Ralph E. Ammon, department director:

"Compulsory grading of all cheese by the state assures the farmer of equal rights and protection. It prevents the manipulation of grades by the buyer to confuse the seller as to the real price. State grading makes it more difficult for the buyer to pay to a third person a bonus or premium at the expense of the farmer."

COW WEIGHS TON—A grade Holstein cow weighing 2,000 pounds was purchased recently by Henry Emmers, 2121 E. John street. The cow, seven years old, produces about 80 pounds of milk per day. The height of the cow may be compared with Emmers, who is six feet tall, or with the ordinary sized cow held by his son, Mark Emmers. The 1-ton cow was purchased from Chris Stecker, Winnebago county. Old Grain Stocks Smaller This Year

Stocks of grain on Wisconsin farms are much smaller than a year ago, according to a crop reporting service bulletin received by County Agent J. F. Magnus.

While smaller than a year ago, the farm stocks of corn are more than double the average stocks for the 10 years 1929-38. Oat stocks are about average but holdings of wheat are considerably smaller.

According to recent estimates, farmers in the state are holding over 7 1/2 million bushels of corn compared with over 10 million bushels a year ago. Oat stocks on farms total nearly 10 million bushels and more than a quarter of a million bushels of wheat are being held. Stocks of oats on farms last year were estimated at nearly 13 million bushels. Stocks of corn for the years 1929-38 averaged nearly 3 1/2 million bushels and oat stocks averaged slightly over 10 million bushels.

The stocks of corn on Wisconsin farms are equal to about a fifth of the crop harvested last year. Oat stocks are equal to 14 per cent of the 1939 crop produced in the state.

Supplies of Slaughter Hogs Expected to Drop

Substantially smaller supplies of slaughter hogs are indicated for the 1940-41 marketing year beginning Oct. 1, according to a bulletin received by J. F. Magnus, Outagamie county agent.

The current report on the livestock situation by the bureau of agricultural economics also shows an indicated drop in slaughter supplies of cattle for the last half of 1940. Slaughter supplies of sheep and lambs are expected to be slightly larger.
